More Than Score Die From Heat and Storm

Prostrations Increase in Areas of Large Population —Ohio Man, Crazed by Heat, Kills Eight—Violent Storms Accompany Heat Wave in Middle West—No Relief In Sight—Heat Claims One Victim Here.

The unusual heat wave that has settled over most of the country, today had killed more than a score. Almost as large a number were dead in storms resulting from the torrid weather.

With prostrations reported in increasing numbers in the areas of large population, weather reports held no hope of immediate relief for the section from the Rocky Mountains to the Atlantic Seaboard, while the death toll and mercury mounted under a broiling sun.

Hamilton, Ohio, listed eight dead in the heat wave's most grim tragedy, when Lloyd Russell, temporarily insane shot and killed that number including his mother and five small children.

Seven were dead in New York, three in Chicago, two in Detroit, four in New England. Storms in Iowa and around Minneapolis had claimed 14 more lives.

Heat Crazed, Kills Eight.

Hamilton, Ohio, June 4.—Crazed by the intense heat, Lloyd Russell, 42, this morning shot and killed eight persons and turned the gun upon himself, sending a bullet through one lung. He first killed his mother, then his sister, his sister-in-law and her five small children.

The victims, in the order in which they apparently were shot to death, are:

Mrs. Rose Russell, 60, Mrs. Emma Russell, 35; John L. Russell, 35; Julia Russell, 10; Robert Russell, 8; Grace Russell, 6; Paul Russell, 3 and Richard Russell, 3 months.

Dorothy, 8, was the only member of the family to escape. She ran, screaming, from the house in her night gown, after the first shot was fired by her uncle.

Neighbors heard the shooting and called the police.

By the time the officers arrived Russell had fired 50 shots or more. Some of the bodies of his victims were punctured five or six times.

The bodies were strewn about the house. The aged mother of the crazed man was killed as she slept. Others fell dead on the floor.

When the police entered the house Russell with one shot through his lung, exclaimed:

His gun was empty, but the officers covered him and took no chance on his firing again. He was weak and offered no resistance. Physicians said Russell would recover.

An armed guard was stationed in the ward to avert another outbreak.

The repeated barking of the guns, punctuated by the screams of the one little girl who escaped into the yard, attracted a great throng of people to the house. They were fearful to enter, however, and stood by outside as the firing continued.

With the arrival of the automobile load of police, however, the fears of the crowd passed and the officers, with guns drawn, closed in on the house and entered the room.

No more shooting followed and a feeling of relief swept the throng.

After Russell had been disarmed the bodies were removed to an undertaking establishment, where an inquest will be held.

Police said there was no doubt that Russell was stark mad.

They said he had not been drinking and attributed his sudden insanity and mad lust for blood to the intense heat.

Russell was not content with shooting his victims once. The bullet riddled bodies were evidence of his viciousness.

Five bullets plowed through the body of one of the children.

The mother, who was shot as she lay asleep in her bed, was riddled.

It was she who was first selected by the heat crazed murderer—the mother who brought him into the world.

Little Dorothy, the seven year old niece of the mad man, is the only one who can tell just what happened when the gun began to roar. She is suffering from a terrific shock and when she does talk, flays an incoherent story. Neighbors are caring for the little girl who will be questioned when she is more composed.

Russell, who never drank, according to friends, was regarded as a "good citizen." He said a mortgage for $1,600 was due on his home Thursday and he did not have the money to meet it. Therefore, according to the police, rather than have himself and his brother's family turned into the streets, he decided to slay everybody being there. Two revolvers were used by Russell.

Many Killed in Storm.

Chicago, Ill., June 4.—Little hope of immediate relief from the heat wave that has prevailed since Sunday was in store today with high temperatures predicted for the next two days.

The heat was accountable for three deaths in Chicago, among them R. M. Browner of Rochester, N. Y., who was stricken at the Congress Hotel where he was a guest.

In several sections of the middle west, the heat wave brought violent damaging rains and windstorms of tornado proportions. Many persons were killed in the storm.

With the heat wave Chicago felt an increase in the mosquito scourge.

"Continued warm," was the forecast for today, with showers predicted for tonight and tomorrow.

The hot weather, according to advices, encompassed the eastern states again this morning, and there were reports of numerous prostrations.

Thousands of persons thronged the parks and beaches here.

An equally high temperature was predicted for today.

The sixth case of heat prostration was recorded today.

New Park Bill Will Be Lost

If Smith Calls Special Session In Belief of Speaker McGinnies—Friends Believe Senate Would Pass Measure.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, June 4.—Governor Smith will not be able to put over a new state park appropriation bill if he calls the Legislature back to Albany for an extraordinary session this month.

This is the belief of Speaker McGinnies of the Assembly, now recognized as the real leader of the Republicans at the last session of the Legislature.

There have been all sorts of reports in the last few days at the Capitol about an extra session. One was that the governor virtually had made up his mind to call it next week. Another was that he had changed his mind, believing that a sufficient number of Republicans would not bolt their party to support the park bill he favors.

"I feel certain Governor Smith will not be able to get the park bill he proposes through the Republican Assembly if he calls a special session," said Speaker McGinnies, who has been at the Capitol for a few days.

There is little doubt, according to the governor's friends, that the executive would be able to get his measure through the Senate. It is understood that the executive has been given to understand that Senators Mastick and Westall of Westchester, Fearon of Syracuse, Whitley of Rochester and Nicol of New York, will support his measure.

During the last week, it is understood, representatives of the state park commissions have been trying to "line up" the Republican legislators in their respective parts of the state for the governor's bill.

The governor wants the state park council to have the right to appropriate land for park purposes without obtaining permission from the state land board. The Republicans, according to Speaker McGinnies, will always insist that the land board act as a "check" upon the activities of the park council when it comes to the taking of land.

In the meantime the Capitol is waiting anxiously to see if the governor calls a special session.

Confessed Murder To Escape Chair

Authorities Believe Kirby's Confession to Brutal Maine Murder to Escape Death Penalty in New York State for Slaying Girl at Nyack.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Augusta, Maine, June 4.—Harry A. Kirby, confessed to the murder of Miss Aida Hayward to escape the electric chair in New York.

The life term in prison, provided by the laws of Maine for a capital crime, appealed to Kirby as a sanctuary through which he would cheat the electric chair for the slaying of a young girl inmate of a school of feeble minded at Nyack, N. Y., a crime which he is strongly suspected by the authorities of having committed.

This was the belief held by Maine officials today after Kirby's voluntary confession that he choked Miss Hayward to death, after he shot Mrs. Emma M. Towns, aunt of Miss Hayward, and burned down the cottage occupied by the two on the shores of Lake Maraacook, Winthrop, Maine.

During his incarceration in Kennebec county jail here the authorities saw to it that Kirby was informed of activities of New York detectives, trying to fasten the death of the girl at Nyack upon him. The death penalty in New York state was frequently referred to, the authorities said.

The "confession" will not be used in court but the prisoner is expected to go to court within the next few days, plead guilty to first degree murder and be sentenced immediately to life imprisonment.

Police are convinced that Mrs. Kirby, who is still in jail here, as the guest of the sheriff, knew nothing of the crime. Kirby himself says he confessed to save his wife—that he loves her deeply and that she is guiltless.

High lights of Kirby's "confession" are:

Inflamed by liquor he lay in wait for the woman and fired point blank at Mrs Towns when she entered the cottage

Pressing the muzzle of his revolver against Miss Hayward's side he forced her to accompany him to another cottage, talking of a share of her $30,000 which he wanted.

Leaving the Hayward girl in a state of collapse he went out and set fire to the cottage where Mrs. Towns lay bleeding.

Later when searchers knocked at his door, Kirby, in terror, and to prevent Miss Hayward from making an outcry, choked her to death and stuffed her body between two mattresses.

Camp Wallkill Sold for $100,000

The New York Times Says:

A camp of 200 acres on the Wallkill river at New Paltz, Ulster county, N. Y., costing more than $100,000 was purchased yesterday by the Church of St. Agnes at 143 East Forty-third street of which Mgr. John P. Chidwick is the pastor.

The property was sold by Camp Wallkill, Inc., Dr. Carl J. Stein, treasurer, and is fully equipped for a boys' camp. Many institutions have had its purchase under consideration including the Brooklyn Hebrew Orphan Asylum, according to Derschuch & Co., real estate brokers of 150 Broadway, who negotiated the sale.

Mgr. Chidwick said last night that the property would be used in conjunction with the church work, especially for the children of St. Agnes's parish.

Camp Wallkill is well known to many Ulster county people, particularly those who attended the picnic of the Ulster County Farm and Home Bureau two years ago, when the anti-tobacco crusaders were successful in preventing the customary sale of cigars and cigarettes on the picnic grounds.

Liquor Proof Wall To Dry America

Government Officials Believe Dry Enforcement Feasible If They Can Prevent Smuggling—To Use Speakers Besides Big Stick.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, June 4.—A liquor proof wall extending entirely around the United States to prevent smuggling of wet goods permanently is the objective of the government's rum war, the treasury disclosed today.

To cut off the liquor supply of those who, with well stocked cellars, have laughed at the Volstead act, is among the prime purposes of the "whiskey crusade" General L. C. Andrews, field marshal of the prohibition forces, declared.

"I believe that we can make the borders and the coast lines as difficult for the liquor smuggler to reach as though they were an armed enemy," Andrews told the International News Service.

Details of a general plan to bring about observation of the dry law are being worked out by Andrews, who was selected by President Coolidge to head enforcement and to coordinate the activities of various agencies.

Initial steps to bring about cooperation of the law enforcement arms, including the coast guard, prohibition unit, customs service, department of justice, immigration inspectors and the department of agriculture's "border patrol," to clamp down the dry lid have proven the plan is feasible according to reports to the treasury.

Another meeting of the "enforcement commission," organized by Andrews and headed by W. W. Husband, assistant secretary of labor, will be called soon Husband will submit a report as to the most effective methodd of bringing about cooperation among the various law enforcement arms of the government.

Besideas his "big stick" methods for "drying up" the country, Andrews plans a series of addresses to university student bodies, commercial and civic organizations in which he will urge that liquor laws should be viewed with the same respect that the average citizen regards other criminal statutes. The first of these talks will be delivered at Trinity College, Mass, June 14.

"Don'ts" for Census Takers

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, June 4.—Here are a few "don'ts" compiled by Florence E. S. Knapp, Secretary of State, governing the small army of men and women serving as census enumerators:

Don't gossip. In case some inquisitive neighbor gets a bit prying about the age of the woman next door, say nothing.

Don't forget that you are to cover your district within fifteen days. That means get busy and keep busy.

Don't indulge in guess work. If no one is home when you first call, return later on. Remember that the state demands facts.

Don't enumerate the pet canary even though there will be plenty of women who will inform you just as you are leaving, that you have forgotten "Dick."

Don't use lead pencil on your field sheets. The law says black ink. Observe it.

Don't forget to wear your badge. That is what they are for.

Don't leave your book of instructions at home, and then resemble the proverbial dumbbell when you are stuck on some question.

Don't forget that the enumeration is as of June 1, and that every person living on that date is to be counted.

Don't forget the rules regarding occupations and do not jot down simply "laborer," but classify such persons.

Smith's car drove into the rear of a new car of William Burger, of Kingston, at Cementon, damaging the rear left fender. He went on toward Catskill and just beyond the passage under the West Shore tracks he ran into the rear of the car of Henry Abraham, of Rosedale, L. I., damaging his rear fender and running board. It was at this point that Sergeant Morrisey made the arrest.

Municipal Kicker Is Good Thing

Philadelphia's Former Executive Finds Him Useful and a Real Friend—New York State Mayors Discuss Municipal Problems.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Syracuse, N. Y., June 4.—Paving problems of cities were taken up today at the closing session of the state conference of mayors at Hotel Syracuse.

The discussion will be followed by a trip to Cortland, where the municipally operated paving plant was inspected.

Mayor John A. Giles of Binghamton outlined the principal needs of an efficient plan for city paving and a general discussion of prices and problems followed.

Election of officers by the chiefs and city clerks will conclude the sessions of organizations allied with the conference.

Welcome Kickers.

At the annual banquet of the conference last night, J. Hampton Moore, former mayor of Philadelphia, urged the officials to welcome "municipal kickers."

He said: "After running along with him for a full term of four years, learning' to accept his abuse with equanimity and endeavoring to correct conditions of which he justly complained, I finally came to the conclusion that the municipal kicker after all is useful and in some instances a real friend."

Garage Space Serious Problem.

William E. Welsh, chairman of the board of appeals, New York city, declared the most serious problem of modern city planning is providing of garage space.

He explained that in the older sections of cities where the houses are built closely together, the garage problem is impossible of an adequate solution.

The increasing tendency towards apartment house dwellings adds another difficulty to the problem, he said, making it almost impossible to provide sufficient garage space for so many families living under one roof.

Urges Aldermen at Large.

Summarizing the sentiments of officials of the conference who have made a study of different forms of municipal government, William P. Capes, secretary of the conference, announced that the myor and aldermen form, with control and responsibility centralized in the executive, is the most satisfactory. He urged that the aldermen be elected from the city at large instead of by the individual wards.

City Manager Unsatisfactory.

Mr. Capes said the various types of city manager government have not proved satisfactory in the larger cities because they fail to fix responsibility and are apt to result in "buck passing."

The trip to Cortland will end the activities of the visiting officials. They will be guests of the city of Cortland at a luncheon at the Country Club and will follow their inspection of the municipal paving plant with visits to other industries in the city.

Enforce Motor Law Strictly

Sufficient Time Has Elapsed for People to Become Familiar With Law —Some Glaring Violations Which Inspectors Will Seek to Stop.

Every operator of a motor vehicle must have a license before a car can be operated. In case where the person has no operator's certificate and desires to learn to operate a car, he or she must secure a learner's permit which is good for thirty days while learning to operate a car. During this time the person holding the learner's permit must be accompanied by a licensed operator or chauffeur at all times when operating a car. The learner's permit can be secured from the local motor vehicle bureau on Fair street for 10 cents and may be renewed at expiration.

The motor vehicle inspectors frequently stop persons who are operating a motor vehicle without a permit of any kind and who appear to believe that so long as they are accompanied by a licensed operator they are complying with the law. The law provides that all persons must hold a certificate and persons who are learning to drive must hold a learner's permit during the time they are learning and during that time they must not drive alone even though they hold a learner's permit. Inspector Van Bergen, who is assigned to the local office, has frequently stopped young women operating a car during the evening without a permit but who claim they did not know they needed a permit to learn if they were accompnied by a young man who was the holder of a license.

Must Have Lights.

Inspectors have received orders from Albany to keep a close watch out for persons driving without the necessary lights at night. In order to avoid trouble with the authorities, Inspector Van Bergen suggests that persons operating cars at night carry at least one extra light bulb for emergency use in case a light burns out on the road.

The headlight law provides that motor vehicles shall show two headlights in front and one light at the rear when being operated on the highways one-half hour after sundown and until one-half hour before sunrise. Frequently when cars are stopped for showing but one headlight the excuse of the driver is that the light "just went out." Carrying a spare light would eliminate this violation of the law and prevent trouble with the authorities as well as make night driving safer.

Passing Cars on Curves.

Another violation of the law which comes in for its share of arrests is the passing of another vehicle going in the same direction on a curve or on a hill where view ahead is obstructed. Inspectors and state troopers at the brow of hills and around curves are daily making arrests for this violation of the law.

The present automobile law has been in effect long enough for all operators to have become familiar with its provisions and inspectors have received instructions to check up on all violations. Although excuses have frequently been accepted in the past, the time is approaching when excuses will no longer go with motor vehicle inspectors whose business is to see that the law is obeyed.

FIRE DEPARTMENT CALLED OUT ON SEVERAL FIRES

The fire department was called out on several fires Wednesday and this morning. Wednesday afternoon some paraffine used in coating barrels became ignited at the Kingston Cooperage plant on Bruyn avenue, causing a still alarm to be sent in to the Central Fire Station. Men at the plant had the fire under control when the firemen arrived. The damage was not extensive.

At one o'clock this morning an alarm was turned in from Box 117 for a fire in the dump off Clifton avenue, and shortly afterward a still alarm called the firemen to the house of Richard Wynkoop at 240 Hurley avenue where fire had broken out in some rubbish in the attic. The damage was slight.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By Mary Graham Bonner

MRS. GIRAFFE'S NEWS

"Well, I am glad you came to call again, Billie Brownie," said Mrs. Giraffe.

Billie Brownie threw his stocking cap up into the air, caught it again and perched himself on a post in the Giraffe Estates.

"How do you think the baby looks?"

"Splendid," said Billie Brownie. "I told them all about your baby in Brownieland and Fairyland," he added, "and they thought your baby certainly was a wonderful one, even from my poor description."

"I am pleased to learn that," said Mrs. Giraffe, "but I do not see how it could be otherwise. I mean I do not see how any one could think otherwise.

"You will excuse me if I do not make my meaning clear the first time. I am stupid, of course."

"Oh, that's quite all right," said Billie Brownie. "I can always wait for a second sentence to explain a meaning."

"That's a relief to my stupid self," Mrs. Giraffe grinned. "Did I ever tell you, Billie Brownie, that since I came to the zoo I have put on weight?

"Yes, that's so. Nor do I mind. There are some who'd object. They'd go around saying:

"'Dear me. I'd love some of that

He Will Follow His Keeper.

food, but I'm afraid it will make me fat, so I will have to refuse.'

"I've heard people refusing candy who'd been walking along by my zoo home and saying this very thing.

"But I don't worry about it. I'm quite proud of it, in fact. You see, I'm a good weight, but I'm not too stout.

"And, as you might say, I've got the height to stand it.

"Many would look like dumplings ready to burst if they weighed as I do. But I've certainly got the figure for it."

"How much do you weigh?" asked Billie Brownie.

"When I came to the zoo," said Mrs. Giraffe, "I weighed thirteen hundred and thirty-five pounds, and I've put on five hundred pounds since then.

"That is to say that I've put on five hundred pounds in about three and a half years.

"I'm about fourteen feet tall, so, you see, it's true when I say my height can stand it.

"My dear mate is not quite as tall as I am, but there is hardly any difference. In fact, we're so nearly of a height that people say—or if they don't they should—

"'How nice those two look together, no more of a height?'

"Dear me," said Billie Brownie, "I should say creatures without your height would look as though they were dumplings ready to burst if they weighed as you do."

"Imagine putting on five hundred pounds and not looking like a balloon."

"By the way," said Mrs. Giraffe, "if you won't think they're more beautiful than my darlings I'll give you the news. There are quite a few other baby animals in the zoo.

"There are three yaks, two swamp wallabies, four sambars, three mouflons, five tahrs, two deer, three American wapiti, three red deer from Europe, five fallow deer and a mountain zebra."

"I have already gone to see the Mountain Zebra and one of the Wallabies," said Billie Brownie, "but I shall go to see the others with pleasure.

"No, I won't think they're more remarkable than your darling."

Mrs. Giraffe's baby was now playing about and was very awkward with so much size to manage for such a baby!

"If you want to go and see the Giant Gallapagos Tortoise I believe he is at home, too.

"He will follow his keeper around and is friendly and good-tempered.

"I believe that is all the news my poor head can hold at one time."

"You've done splendidly," said Billie Brownie, "and I shall go and make a few calls before returning to Brownieland.

"But I'll tell them again about your fine child. I'll certainly do that."

"Good," said Mrs. Giraffe. "The child does deserve praise."

Young America

"Is the world round?" a schoolma'am asked the little boy.

"No'm."

"It isn't, eh? Is it flat, then?"

"No'm."

"Are you crazy, child? If the world isn't round and isn't flat, what is it?"

"Pop says it's crooked."

From four things the Lord preserve us: a painted woman, a conceited valet, salt meat without mustard and a late dinner.—Italian.

SEASONABLE FOODS

A sweet sandwich takes the place of cake for a child's lunch and is much more wholesome. For afternoon teas the sweet sandwich is very popular.

Raisin and Date Sandwiches.—Take two cupfuls of raisins, one cupful of dates, and a little lemon juice. Chop the fruit and mix to moisten with the lemon juice. Spread on slices of buttered bread.

Raisin and Peanut Sandwiches.—Put a cupful of seeded raisins through the meat chopper and add one cupful of peanuts, chopped, with a little butter, creamed. Spread on buttered bread—whole wheat is especially good.

Orange Marmalade Sandwiches.—Beat cream cheese with a little softened butter or thick cream until soft and smooth enough to spread. Butter thin slices of bread, spread with the cheese, then cover with orange marmalade.

Orange Sandwiches. — Take two tablespoonfuls of orange juice, one teaspoonful of lemon juice and one cupful of confectioner's sugar; beat until smooth. Butter wafers crisped in the oven, cool and spread with the filling, put together sandwich fashion.

Maple and Almond Sandwich.—Spread white bread with butter and cover with the following filling: Scraped maple sugar, chopped blanched almonds and cream to make a paste. Other nuts may be used, pecans or walnuts.

Shortcake.—Take two tablespoonfuls of sugar, three cupfuls of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, mix well, then stir in one cupful of sweet cream, which has been well mixed with two beaten eggs. Beat and spread in two shallow pans to bake. Spread with butter when baked and serve with any sweetened fresh fruit. Sliced oranges are delicious, pouring all the juice over the hot cake.

A small freezer in which a little ice cream or frozen dessert may be prepared and frozen is convenient; then set the freezer in the ice box. This will save repacking. Remove the dasher and beat the frozen mixture down from the sides of the can.

For Fair Autoist and Women Sports Lovers

For a thrilling spin through the country, what could be more appropriate than this leather sports costume of green suede. The hat and coat are of Aden green, while the skirt is of a darker shade.

Shoe Buckles Are Set With Precious Stones

The humble shoe buckle has become a glorified and important accessory in dressing the fashionable foot. For evening shoes there are shown buckles, buttons, ornaments of artistic design, set with precious or semi-precious stones. Since steel and jet have been revived, many pretty shoe decorations are made of these. Steel buckles, large and small, are exceedingly fashionable, and are very practical, for they serve equally well for a shoe of soft leather or a satin slipper.

The fine quality of steel is cut to give an effect almost as brilliant as diamonds, and is very chic on black or grey shoes. Some lovely steel ornaments are made in crescent form, with a little fringe of cut steel beads trimming the lower edge, and giving a trim, piquant appearance to the foot. Designs that are entirely new are shown among the French and American buckles. For walking shoes they are of leather, silver rimmed, of colored and enameled metal, and many other styles, fitting all sorts of footwear, from the leather thong to the most costly jeweled ornaments.

In shops that specialize in antiques and in Persian novelties are being shown some rare Eighteenth century Spanish earrings of artistic importance. They are fashioned of bright pale gold with a smooth, highly polished surface in sections of graceful outline, in each of which is set deep jewels—rubies, emeralds, brilliants and topaz, both white and yellow—to reflect the blaze in Spanish eyes. Among the most unusual of these earrings are a few having brooch and stomacher to match them, relics of the grand seoras of Spanish nobility. The earrings are very long, touching the shoulder, but being hollow they are light in weight.

Shaded Tintings Used for Dainty Underthings

Shaded effects are not confined to formal attire. Their vogue has extended to the most intimate garments and one sees entrancing lingerie fashioned of silk, chiffon, linen and batiste which shade through several tones of a single color or which combine two or three different shades in harmony or in striking contrast.

One of the simplest ways to achieve this effect of shading, especially in designing negligees, is to use three layers of georgette or chiffon. The result is charming, for it is hard to tell where one color begins and the other ends. Or linen an ombre effect is attained by hand-blocking, while tie-dying—tying knots in the material before dipping it in the dye—brings out curious and fascinating designs on silk.

Shaded georgette, chiffon, crepe de chine and satin may now be bought by the yard and fashioned into the most exquisite models. The Italian silk undergarments also are made in shaded tintings and are quite as lovely as they are serviceable.

Very new and interesting is the "undie," consisting of chemise, panties or step-in. It is made of georgette crepe in shades of pink and blue. The pink is used for the foundation slip and over this is poised another of blue, which is cut in scallops and attached to the underslip. A deep scalloped collar forms sleeve caps and a similar idea of decoration is repeated in the scalloped border. To wear over this is a negligee of pink satin lined with printed chiffon of blue with large pink dots in a satin-finished weave.

Fabrics for Spring

Silks and chiffons are vieing with woolen materials for pre-eminence in the spring ballrooms. The new tailored suits are almost universally distributed by the short two-button, collarless trimmed jackets with notched lapels.

LOCAL DEATH RECORD.

Recent Deaths and Funerals of Persons in This Vicinity.

Jacob Nonemaker of Wurts avenue, New Paltz, died on Monday at Vassar Hospital in Poughkeepsie.

Mrs. Elizabeth Myer Chipman, a woman advanced in years and a native of Saugerties, died on June 2, at the home of her niece in Brooklyn, where she had been residing for some time. Mrs. Chipman was a member of the Congregational Church of Saugerties and was a woman who was held in high esteem. The funeral services were held in Saugerties this afternoon with interment in Montalin View Cemetery.

Camilla D., widow of William A. Gosberie, died in Brooklyn Thursday, May 28, the funeral being held on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock at her home, 173 Quincy street. The remains were brought to this city on Monday and interred in Wiltwyck Cemetery. She was the daughter of John D. Wilson, who had a hat store in the 50's and 60's at what was then 76 North Front street. The Wilson home was a large frame building painted white, sitting back of St. James street at the junction of Albany avenue, on extensive grounds, now forming St. James Court. Older residents will remember Camilla D. Wilson as an unusually handsome woman, and she and her husband resided in Kingston for a number of years. Mr. Gasberie having been in the United States mail service as a postal clerk.

Joseph L. Murray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Murray, and husband of Marie Cline Murray, died at the home of his parents, 39 Hone street, Wednesday evening, following a protracted illness. Mr. Murray was born in Port Ewen, later removing to this city, where he has been engaged in the transportation business. Mr. Murray was very well and favorably known in this section and points along the Hudson. He is survived by his wife, his parents, and two daughters, Delores and Anna; two brothers, John and Thomas, and three sisters, Mary, Anna and Mrs. William Donovan, and one cousin, Miss Mary Quilon. Funeral from the late residence on Saturday morning at 8:45 o'clock, thence to St. Mary's Church at 9:30 o'clock, with a high Mass of requiem for the repose of his soul. Interment in the family plot in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Cornish Harrington, one of the most respected residents of the town of Shandaken, died at his home in Townsend Hollow on Thursday, May 28, after an illness of only a few days. Mr. Harrington was born in 1843 and spent his entire life in this vicinity. He was a man of generous impulses and never forgot the hospitable ways of the pioneer. In his death another name is stricken from the ever lessening roll of old settlers. His widow, two daughters, Mrs. Alice Hill and Mrs. Anna Morris, and a grandson, Jesse Harrington, survive. He was a man who united sound sense with strong conviction and was ever ready to extend a helping hand to others, and by his ever jovial character he brightened the pathway of those with whom he came in contact. The funeral services were held by the M. E. Church at Pine Hill Saturday afternoon with the Rev. C. J. F. Kell officiating, and the remains were interred in the village cemetery.

Word was received in this city this morning of the death of James Manning at St. Vincent's Hospital, New York city, where he was operated upon a few weeks ago. He is the son of John H. and Mary Kitty Manning and was one of the best known young men in this city. Besides his parents he is survived by two brothers, John and Joseph, and one sister, Margery. News of his death will be received with great regret by the many friends he had gained through his kind and jovial nature. He was a member of Kingston Council, No. 273, Knights of Columbus and of the Holy Name Society of St. Mary's. He was also a member of the St. Mary's Dramatic Society and was well known as an entertainer, having appeared in a number of minstrel performances conducted by local societies. He was also a member of the Battery A, 156th Field Artillery, being a corporal. The funeral will be held from his late home, 159 Spring street, time to be announced later.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JUNE 4, 1925.

STATE RIGHTS.

It was recently estimated that approximately one dollar in every seven which Congress appropriates under ordinary conditions is voted to the states in the form of Federal aid for State roads, schools, reclamation projects and the like, and it was objected that in the case of most of these appropriations the states must surrender a measure of their sovereignity over state affairs before the subsidy is paid them. Already disturbed by the continuing centralization of power in the Federal branch of our dual system of government, and the corresponding weakening of the rights of the states even in their own local affairs, with increasing damage to the old American principle of home rule, Eastern observers have raised a cry of alarm and thus stimulated discussion of an issue almost as old as the Constitution.

Apparently the Western attitude in this connection is in marked contrast with that of the old states of the Atlantic seaboard. It seems that Westerners display lack of knowledge of as well as complete indifference to the principle involved, caring only to secure Federal aid without thought of the cost. According to Frank B. Kent, writing from Utah to the Baltimore Sun, when these matters of subsidies, Federal centralization and state rights are mentioned to Westerners "they do not know what it is all about" in the first place, and "when they find out they just laugh." Mr. Kent summarizes the sentiment of Utah as follows: "You fellows in the east can hug state rights to your bosoms all you want. We want the government to take more interests in us, not less: it can interfere and encroach here all it pleases—the more the better."

Difference of sentiment in this connection between the old states of the Atlantic seaboard and not only the very young states of the far west, but even the comparatively young states of the Mississippi Valley, has long been noticeable. This difference is not merely one of public sentiment grounded in local interests but of inherited traditions on the one hand and the lack thereof on the other.

The original thirteen states or colonies existed before the framing of the Federal Constitution of 1787, and entered the Federal Union voluntarily while claiming complete sovereignty except in certain general matters involving the welfare and protection of all. The later-constructed states of the west, on the other hand, were not likewise free to choose. They came into existence and were admitted to the Union by act of Congress, and thus in a sense were from the outset creatures of the Federal power, notwithstanding the grant to them of the usual rights of self-governing states. Though state pride is not lacking, the principle of state sovereignty inevitably means less in the newer commonwealths of the west than in the older commonwealths of the east. This difference is the more important because the young states with such a history vastly outnumber the old, and, as they stand with the encroaching Federal power rather than with the old protesting commonwealths, the principle of state rights—except in a greatly modified and emasculated form—would seem destined inevitably to take its place among the lost causes of history.

The remarkable fact has been brought to light that in 1919 Premier Baldwin gave $600,000, a fifth of his wealth, to the British government, in the hope that other rich men would follow his example and end the financial crisis. A few others did so, but the total amounted to only two and a half millions. A patriotic act calling for the expenditure of a fifth of one's wealth is rare indeed.

Although the English were called "a nation of shopkeepers" as far back as Napoleon's time, British business men are now urged by Sir Alfred Mond to look to the United States for lessons. "Salesmanship," he says, "must become what it is in America, an art. In this country we don't sell; we wait for somebody to buy."

An old man of 96 displayed wisdom appropriate to his years recently when he said: "There is nothing that will take the place of work, either to gain success or to gain happiness, or both." He also stated an important and too often forgotten truth when he said that "the way to get friends is to be a friend."

That Body of Yours

THE X-RAY.

Perhaps you wonder why your physician asks you to go to the expense of having X-ray pictures taken of a barium meal, as it passes through your body.

A picture is taken immediately after the meal, five minutes afterwards, then six hours, again in twenty-four, forty-eight, seventy-two hours afterwards, and so forth.

Now this costs twenty to thirty dollars or even more, but if your doctor recommends it, you can readily see that he wants to clear up some point that has arisen.

These cases are usually chronic, of long drawn out, and instead of treating you month after month with medicines, he can often get a better knowledge of what is wrong, in just the few days it takes to have the pictures taken.

I spoke once before of a chap who thought he had an ulcer of the stomach. Some of the symptoms pointed that way and others were at a variance with the usual symptoms of ulcer. He was drinking a great deal of milk, and had lost no weight. The pictures showed no ulcer as present, but that an ulcer that had healed some time previously, had almost completely closed the opening from the stomach to intestines, and so only milk or very liquid substances could pass through. Ordinary food gave him very severe pain. He therefore had the choice of drinking nothing but milk and other liquids, or eating ordinary diet and suffering for it. The other way out was to get a new passage made from the stomach to the intestine. As he was a young man, with many years apparently ahead of him, he allowed the surgeons to make this new passage. Six days after the operation he ate a poached egg on toast, and thenceforth ate regular diet without any distress whatever.

You can readily see, therefore, that any physician would have spent a great deal of time on this case without giving any relief to the patient.

The X-ray does not always give the complete diagnosis, but the money is usually well invested just the same.

Sometimes your dentist would like to advise an X-ray of your teeth, but hesitates to put you to that expense. You would be making a good investment if you had an X-ray taken every five years.

If you have reached the age of 30, have some teeth or bridge-work in your mouth, get an X-ray of all your teeth, not just the suspected ones.

The X-ray is a wonderful aid in this generation. Make use of it.

LADY MARY ARMYNE.

Lady Mary Armyne was the daughter of Henry Talbot, fourth son of George, Earl of Shrewsbury. She married Sir William Armyne, and distinguished herself by her knowledge of history, divinity and of the languages. She was very liberal to the poor, and contributed largely to the support of the missionaries sent to North America. She endowed three hospitals, and died in 1675.

FIRST FAMILY HOTEL

The first "family" or temperance hotel in London, the forerunner of tens of thousands of such hostelries in all parts of the world, was opened in Covent Garden 151 years ago today. An inn for the more or less permanent accommodation of families, and minus a bar, was an undreamed of thing, and other hotelkeepers laughed the project to scorn but despite the noisy derision, the scheme was successful, and made a snug fortune for its founder, David Low. Low's original building is still standing, at last reports being used for boxing matches for the famous National Sporting Club. It was erected early in the 17th century, being originally the home of a Mr. Digby.

AMERICAN SPEAKERS.

The first speaker of the House of Representatives of the U. S. Congress was Frederic A. Muhlenberg, of Pennsylvania, who was born in Trappe, Pa., in 1750 and died in Lancaster, Pa., 134 years ago today, June 4, 1801. He was the son of the Rev. Heinrich Melchoir Muhlenberg, founder of the German Lutheran Church in America, and brother of John Peter Gabriel Muhlenberg, clergyman, general in Washington's army and congressman and U. S. senator. Muhlenberg served as Speaker throughout the first congress of the U. S. being succeeded by Jonathan Trumbull of Connecticut but was returned to the speaker's chair in the third congress.

Among his famous successors were: Henry Clay, who was speaker of six congresses; James L. Polk, Robert C. Winthrop, Schuyler Colfax, James G. Blaine, John G. Carlisle, Thomas B. Reed, Joseph G. Cannon and Champ Clark. Only one speaker of the house has ever reached the White House, that one being James K. Polk, who defeated Henry Clay, an ex-speaker, for the high office.

Vocational Plan Supper at "Y.W."

There was a unique and decidedly worth-while supper given at the Y. W. C. A. on Wednesday evening, when some fifty-eight high school and other girls, interested in the vocational guidance plan of the Y. W. C. A., and those representing the lines of business and the professions the girls were interested in were the guests. The gym was very prettily decorated and a nice supper was served. Under the leadership of Miss Priscilla Davis, cheer leader at the high school, with Miss Marjorie Norwood at the piano, all present sang the high school song, after which Dr. Michael asked the blessing. During the supper there was a lot of jolly cheering and singing by the girls, after which Mrs. Rice introduced Mrs. Frank Thompson, chairman of the educational department of the Y. W. C. A., under which department the vocational guidance work comes.

Mrs. Thompson explained that last fall at the Kingston High School a questionnaire was given to the boys regarding vocational help and it proved so successful that it was decided to offer the same privilege to the girls. Some fifty-eight girls had signed up for one vocation or another and in response to those requests for guidance the Y. W. C. A. board of directors had been so fortunate as to secure the people at the guest table who would be only too glad to talk with the girls about the work they would choose. Dr. Michael would confer with those who wanted secretarial work; Prof. Spaulding, supervisor of music in our public schools, and Mrs. William M. Mills, supervisor of music at New Brunswick, N. J., before coming to Kingston represented musical interests, as would Miss Los Kamp along vocal lines. Prof. Dunbar, of the high school faculty, was to consider research work and also would help the girls who did not know what they wanted to do to find their proper niche. Anton Otto Fischer, noted illustrator, and now living in Kingston, was there to talk about the art field with the girls. Miss Morningstar, of the Kingston City Hospital, and Miss McCarthy, of the Benedictine Hospital, would confer with those girls who were interested in becoming nurses. The home economic problems would be taken care of by Miss Fisher, of the Home Bureau, and Miss Schnitzler, of the high school. The girls wanting to become expert hair dressers, etc., were recommended to Miss Eckhardt, who was present, while Miss Deegan interview a group of telephone girls to be. Mrs. Gifford was prepared to talk dentistry; Mrs. Reed, journalism, and the girls wishing to specialize in dancing were to have later conferences with Mrs. Delta Boice Fromer. Kindergartners were referred to Mrs. May Everett Matthews, and those wishing to become pharmacists to Miss Bongartz, while girls interested in the tea room project were to see Mrs. G. Van Deusen Hutton. Prof Van Ingen and Miss Case and Miss Holmes, of the part-time school, on teaching.

Following these introductions, brief and helpful talks were given by Mr. Dunbar on the general topic of vocational guidance and the help it can be in any life and then on some outstanding vocations for women; by Mr. Fischer on art work, especially illustrating; by Dr. Michael on secretarial work and the Scudder School in New York city; Mr. Van Ingen on teaching; both Miss Morningstar and Miss McCarthy on nursing.

Before the gathering broke up into groups for actual conference, Miss Estey made announcement of the Schubert Choral Club concert to be given Friday evening at the high school, telling those present that from part of the proceeds of the winter concert given by this club, it had been made possible to secure the questionnaires for the vocational guidance plan and to provide the supper which all had enjoyed.

DO THIS AFTER SEVERE ILLNESS

How to Speedily Gain Strength and Put on Needed Weight.

Nothing like the wonderful vitalizing vitamines in Cod Liver Oil to help convalescing people to quickly get strong and well—everybody knows that.

But nobody wants to take the ill-smelling, horrible tasting, stomach upsetting oil itself, so nowadays, up to date medical men are ordering a tablet of Cod Liver Oil and it surely has proved a blessing to thousands of people who have been sapped of their natural strength after a severe illness and especially after the Grippe or a stubborn cough or cold.

Ask any regular druggist for a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets. They cost but little, are sugar coated and as pleasant to take as candy.

Skinny men and women take them to speedily put on plenty of good healthy solid flesh and for this purpose they are so extremely good that thin men and women often take on 5 pounds or more in 30 days. As a matter of fact, your druggist will return your money if you don't take on 5 pounds in 30 days.

RADIO

All things considered, ease of control, simplicity of construction, selectivity and range of reception the five-tube tuned radio frequency set is the most efficient hook-up that has been developed. The one stumbling block has been the proper means of controlling the oscillating characteristics of the tube. Several means of doing this have been devised, most of them effective, but all had their drawbacks. The monophase, recently described in the Radio News and tested out in that publication's laboratories, seems to be one of the best circuits yet offered.

It is well known that when several stages of radio frequency amplification are employed in radio receivers there is a tendency for self-oscillation to occur in the circuits. This is due to the feeding back of radio frequency energy from the plate circuit of a tube to the grid circuit of any other tube, or to its own grid circuit.

The Feed-Back.

There are, in general, three ways of preventing this feed-back: viz., the introduction of resistance into the oscillatory circuits, neutralization of the tube capacity or magnetic coupling, introduction into the circuits of electromotive forces which have a polarity (or phase) opposed to that of the incoming signals.

The last method is that employed in the superdyne receiver and is also the method which has been employed in this receiver. There is a difference, however, in the way in which the circuit stability is accomplished. For in the superdyne this so-called "negative feed-back" is accomplished by coupling a coil in the plate circuit of a stage to a coil in the grid circuit, whereas, in the monophase system the coupling is between a coil in the filament circuit and the one in the grid circuit.

The fundamental circuit diagram is shown in Fig. 1. Here the common terminal (the negative filament connection) is broken and the feed-back coil connected across the break. The polarity of the feed-back coil is to be made such that it will prevent self-oscillation.

Fig. 2 shows the complete wiring diagram of the set. Three such feed-back coils are used, one for each stage of radio frequency amplification and one for the detector circuit. One might think that by using so many adjustable parts, the operation of the set would become very complicated. Such is not the case, however, for it will be found that two of the feed-back coils can be left untouched once they are adjusted, so that the number of tuning controls in the set is reduced to the three condenser dials and one dial for adjusting the first feed-back coil or compensator.

The idea is that the second stage of R.F. amplification is adjusted on the long waves, so that, as the feed is greatest with the short waves, there will be less tendency for oscillations. That is, the set is tuned in on the longest wave it is desired to receive, say 600 meters, and the second and third compensating coils adjusted carefully to the point at which oscillating just ceases. After this, they can be left alone, for on all wave-lengths shorter than this there will be less tendency for self-oscillation to occur, on account of the increased negative feed-back on the shorter wave-lengths.

The Amplification.

The amplification in these stages will always be high, however; in fact, it will be very close to the amplification obtainable at the critical point, for exceedingly small adjustment of the compensators is necessary to start or stop oscillations. After the second and third compensators are properly adjusted they are to be left alone and the circuits can be brought up to the critical point by manipulating the first compensator alone.

There is an interesting point in connection with the placing of the feed-back coils which deals with their position with respect to the secondaries of the tuning units. It will be noted in this circuit that the compensator is placed at that end of the secondary coil which is connected to the filament. There is a very good reason for this, it being that the controlling is done at the low potential end of the coil, and the adjustment of the compensators will not be so critical.

This is contrary to the general practice of placing ticklers at the grid end of the coil, but this latter is done in cases where it is desired to increase the regeneration by tightening the coupling. Again, it must be remembered that the third winding is not similar to the reversed tickler in the superdyne, but it does create a bucking E.M.F., which acts against the oscillating circuit and produces a tendency toward damping. It will be remembered, too, that the coupling must be loosened in this circuit to increase the regeneration. It is at once evident that we are not trying to increase regeneration. The only regeneration that will exist in the receiver is that which it inherently possesses due to the natural tendencies of radio-frequency amplifiers.

Constructional.

The first step in assembling this receiver is to procure the best of the necessary materials. A 27 by 26-inch panel and a 7 by 24-inch baseboard are fastened together in the customary manner, after the panel is drilled with the necessary holes

The construction of the radio frequency transformers is not a difficult one. Three bakelite or hard rubber tubes 2½ inches in diameter and 6 inches long are required. There are wound 45 turns of No. 22 D.C.C. wire. A 6-turn winding of the same size wire composes a primary winding ⅛ of an inch from the first winding. The secondary winding is then continued for another 45 turns. The compensating coil is next placed on the tubing and consists of six turns of wire wound in the opposite direction to that of the other windings. Two small brackets are used to fasten the radio-frequency transformers to the baseboard.

The above description pertains to two of the transformers, the third being slightly different in that the compensating coil, instead of being wound on the tube itself, is placed on a small rotor at one end of the tube. This rotor is a piece of bakelite tubing two inches in diameter and one inch long, at one end of which is placed the six-turn winding. It is not necessary that the wire be wound in any specific direction, since the coil can be readily turned through 180 degrees and thus change its polarity.

The wiring of the receiver is not very difficult, since there are no set rules, except that careful work brings good results. In case trouble is experienced from the beginning, the connections to the compensating coils should be reversed one at a time until the undesirable oscillations are eliminated. It will be found advisable to place two by-pass condensers across the "B" battery and also to use a .0005 mfd. condenser between the grid and plate terminals of the last audio-frequency amplifier tube.

As regards the selectivity of the set, it is safe to say that it surpasses the majority of those on the market today. In sensitivity, too, due to the exacting values of the apparatus used and the correct engineering principles involved, the receiver stands as a big step in the development of tuned radio frequency sets.

As will be noted, the coils are only 9/16 inches apart, reducing to a minimum the tendency towards inter-stage coupling with resultant oscillations. Two stages of audio-frequency amplification will be found to give more than sufficient volume, it being necessary to incorporate a by-pass condenser across the grid and plate terminals of the last tube.

Grand Stand Greatest Risk

Do Not Overestimate Ability in Water to Attract Attention if You Value Life, Saver Warns.

This is the sixth article in the series of twelves giving pointers with a view to lessening drownings The seventh will appear tomorrow

Lesson 6—Tendency to "Show-Off" Fatal in Water.

(By Commodore W. E Longfellow, Life Saving Expert American National Red Cross)

(Written for International News Service.)

Swimming is the first water sport to learn If you are considering the thrills of surf riding, aquaplaning, canoeing under sail, speeding 40 to 50 miles an hour in a high-powered motor boat, or even a fishing trip in a small boat, you will be safer if you first learn how to swim.

No water sport is safe for a "sink easy," as a new swimmer that cannot go 50 feet is called In many children's camps new swimmers are required to wear a small fishing sinker around the neck with a piece of bright-colored ribbon A fisherman's float or "dobber" is sometimes used instead to give the swimming instructor a chance to watch these novices in the water. Some such plan of marking all inexperienced swimmers at shore resorts would simplify the whole problem of guarding bathers against drowning

Water Egotism Fatal.

The one who can swim a little or can do a few showy dives without being an efficient swimmer is the most dangerous factor in the water. In analyzing the causes of drowning, the "show-off," the "half-baked" swimmer who insists on being the center of attraction, heads the list by a big margin.

The Delaware Safety Council, analyzing drownings in that state, discovered that males between the ages of 18 and 35 (the mating ages) were the most frequent victims of drownings. They felt the impulse to prove to the admiring onlookers that they were the best aquatic performers—they dived into shallow water, they swam toward mid-stream, or they entered the breakers and started for the other side of the ocean without thought of coming back and without the ability to return. This type of fellow would be just as popular and far happier if he won the right to wear a life saving emblem on his bathing suit.

Be an efficient swimmer!

Says Hot Cross Bun Is of Pagan Origin

The origin of the hot cross bun is attributed to many sources. Some authorities associate it with the offerings presented, in ancient times, to the gods One species of sacred bread was called boun; and is described as a kind of cake with a representation of two horns, apparently an offering to the moon.

On the other hand, it is held that "bun" is from the old French word "bugne," applied to a sort of fritter. Though the origin of the hot cross bun was pagan, it soon became connected with the Christian religion.

Buns were apparently eaten on Good Friday, as one of the few allowable items of fasting fare. They were also hung up as talismans against evil, and were kept from one Good Friday to another, being regarded as a cure for various ailments.—London Tit-Bits.

Survival of Pagan Practices

Wells were once worshiped in Great Britain and a survival of ancient custom still prevails in Derbyshire, in the vicinity of the famous "Peak," immortalized by Sir Walter Scott. Just outside the hamlet of Foolow is a well by the roadside. Every year, at a particular time, the girls of the village throw pins into the well. They do not know why, but tell inquirers that the custom is very old. As a matter of fact it is of immense antiquity, having originated with the well worship of pagan times. In Italy, where several such wells have been excavated, it is not unusual to find that the stratified layers of coins and other objects present a continuous and graphic picture of the history of the country back almost to the beginnings of man.—Family Herald.

Ancient Roman Laws

The Laws of the Twelve Tables was a famous code of Roman laws, drawn up by the Decemvirs to protect the plebeians against the oppression of the patricians. The first ten tables were enacted in 451 B. C. and the two remaining ones were added by a second decemvirate in 450. These last contained regulations obnoxious to the common people, and were styled by Cicero "the two tables of unjust laws." The Laws of the Twelve Tables were engraved on bronze plates and set up in the Comitium. They constituted the basis of the written law of Rome and as late as the time of Cicero were committed to memory by every schoolboy. The original tables are said to have been destroyed during the sack of Rome under Brennus in 390 B. C.—Exchange.

Trimming Up the Canary

It is not dangerous to clip a canary bird's toenails if it's done carefully. A caged canary doesn't have gravel enough nor get exercise enough to keep its claws worn down; they become talons and greatly inconvenience their owner. To clip them, hold the body of the bird in the palm of the hand and grip a leg between the thumb and index finger at what corresponds to the ankle. The trimming operation should be performed in a good light. A vein may be seen in each claw—like a thin red hair. Be careful not to cut as far back as this vein.

Creatures That Take the Palm for Ugliness

A writer describes the two earth pigs, or aard varks, at the zoological gardens, London, as nightmares, says Christopher Bark in the Family Herald, and certainly, for sheer hideousness they can give points and a beating to almost any other four-legged animal. Their nearest rival is probably the wart hog, with its fantastic tusks and huge wen of wart underneath each eye. Another mammal which is so utterly ugly that it makes one feel uncomfortable to look at it is the so-called naked bat (chiromeles torquatus). The body is stark naked, with a hideously greased black skin Head and face are also naked except for a few scanty clusters of stiff hairs which grow out of wart-like excrescences. Around the neck is a collar of dingy brown hair resembling a mangy fur tippet.

The creature is not only repulsive to sight, but also to the sense of smell. It is a sort of winged skunk, the odor of which is literally sickening.

Among reptiles there are a number so fantastically hideous that no mere description can do justice to their looks, or lack of them.

The palm in this respect belongs to the horrid moloch of Australia, commonly known as the "Thorny Devil."

This is a stumpy lizard about eight inches long, of a dirty yellow color, with muddy brown patches. From the tip of its nose to the end of its tail it is covered with spines which are of all shapes and sizes. The largest grow upon its head and show up like two curved horns. Its feet are armed with strong, sharp claws.

The frilled lizard, another Australian reptile, lives on its locks. If alarmed, it goes upon its hind legs and instantly spreads an enormous ruff. It flashes its snake-like tail and opens a mouth full of needle-like teeth.

The octopus, incarnation of horror, is as dangerous as it looks. The sting ray, a hideous creature, has a powerful tail armed with a sharp spine which exudes poison like a snake's fang. Tropic seas are full of fish of fantastic shapes armed with terrible spines and long threatening teeth. Not all these are bad as they look, yet as a general rule an ugly fish is also a dangerous one.

Selling Children in Peru

Legalized child slavery still exists in Peru—even in Lima, the modern capital city. Indian peons frequently sell their children to well-to-do families for sums equivalent to about $4.25. The sales are made usually when the children are about eight years old, and the purchasers have exclusive use and control of the children until they are sixteen years old in the case of a girl, or eighteen years if a boy. As long as the owner feeds and clothes the child no one can take it away. There have been recorded cases in which, when one woman sought to buy a child from another by offering the father of the child more money, the courts upheld the rights of the first mistress. Girls are sold more often than are boys, inasmuch as the Indians regard girl children as liabilities

Field Day for School No. 3

Last Thursday, Hasbrouck Park was the scene of a joyous group of children from School No. 3. It was Field Day and the following pleasing program was given:

A little dance, entitled, "This is the Way My Dolly Walks," was given by the girls of the First Grade.

That was followed by "Did You Ever See a Laddie?" given by the boys of the First Grade. They proved that they could do as well as the girls.

"Peas, Porridge Hot," was played by the pupils of the Second Grade.

"Nixie Polka," a very pretty dance, was rendered by the pupils of the Third Grade, in a very graceful manner.

Then came the Overhead Relay, given by the pupils of the Fourth Grade, or Room Five. This created much excitement. There were teams

1. Stanley Remseszweski, lieutenant.
2. Samuel Wood, lieutenant.
3. Alice Golshersky, lieutenant.

The score thirteen to nine was in favor of Teams 2 and 3, Lieutenants Samuel Wood and Alice Golshersky.

Then there wase Circle Dodge Ball, given by the pupils of the same grade.

The Tug of War, given by the boys of the Fifth and Sixth Grades, was in favor of Grade Five.

There was also one between the Seventh and Eighth Grades. In this the latter won.

Shuttle Relay Race, which was between the girls of the Seventh and Eighth Grades, was won by the Eighth Grade girls.

Then followed Circle Dodge Ball, given by the girls of the Fifth and Sixth Grades.

That was followed by Circle Dodge Ball, given by the boys of the Fifth and Sixth Grades.

The last number of the day's program was Fan Throw, given by the girls of the Fifth and Sixth Grades.

Altogether the program was very pleasing and exciting. The pupils' enthusiasm was good to see.

"See that guy that just went out?" the barber asked his victim. "Well, he's the lowest scoundrel that ever lived."

"What did he do to you?" inquired the victim.

"He didn't do nothing to me; but he's been beating my time with my girl. That's why I'm mad at him," answered the razor handler. "I got even with him though."

"Howzat?" the helpless one wanted to know.

"Well, you see he came in here and wanted to get a shave—"

"Well, you cut his face all up?"

"Naw. When he wanted me to put skin lotion on his face, I put hair restorer," finished the torturer.

Now "Mary" said "I'm All Alone,"
I wish I'd see "My Man."
When down "Memory Lane" rushed forth
Both "Sam" and "Dapper Dan."
Not far behind trailed "Sally"—looked
Like "The End of a Perfect Day."
"Stumbling" "Down That Long, Long Trail"
"For Her Sweetie Went Away."
Then up rode "Ray in His Chevrolet"
To call on "Sally Lou,"
She was mad but he made her glad
With "No Other Girl But You."
On "The Way Up Broadway"
I saw "Irene" "Playing Tag"
And "Mammy" washing windaws
With that favorite "Twelfth Street Rag."
Then someone emptied "The Old Oaken Bucket."
It was "Night" and started to pour,
But "Every Cloud Has a Silver Lining,"
So "It Ain't Gonna Rain No More."

Zion City has decreed that the world is flat. They must mean France and Germany.

Nobody ever saw a grouchy barber, because if he is that way he never gets a second chance at a customer. Grouchiness and razors don't go well together.

It was a dark night. A man was riding a bicycle with no lamp. He came to a cross road, and did not know which way to turn. Through the gloom he saw a sign on a post. He felt in his pocket for a match. He found one. Climbing to the top of the pole, he lit the match carefully, and in the ensuing glimmer read: "Wet Paint."

The further a wild rumor travels the wilder it gets.

"Well, well," said the absent minded man as he stood in the bathtub, "now what did I get in here for?"

"Mother," called the charming and popular young girl, "Mother," she repeated plaintively, "I never can finish this in time."

"Finish what in time?" mother answered in surprise. It was so unusual for daughter to finish anything.

Finally the mother was concerned. "Finish peeling what?"

"Cranberries, of course," said the daughter.

With the modern flapper the three "R's" spell "Rouge," "Rainment" and "Ramble."

The Boss: Mr. Sugarkane, I engaged you as billing clerk. That did not include cooing too.

She never knows how much she wants him till she loses him or how little she wants him till she has him.

Nobody can accuse the bootlegger of being a fool—he has too much sense to drink the stuff he sells.

Why the slicker?
I'm so dumb I don't know enough to go in when it rains.

If you want to have the comfortable assurance that your house will be thoroughly heated on small coal rations, by all means install a celebrated Thatcher Tubular Warm Air Furnace. In the celebrated Thatcher "Tubular" Furnace, the ball-bearing revolving "anti-clinker" grates rest on the base, and are easily operated. Moving in a circular manner, the fire is cleaned on all sides, which insures quick combustion, devoid of the deadening effect of accumulated ashes.

Ulster Garden Club Decides to Hold Annual Affair There on June 16—Mrs. Carter Entertains Members With Vivid Description of Her Winter at Minorca.

At a meeting of the Ulster Garden Club, held at the home of Mrs. Williams Carter on Tuesday afternoon, Mrs Carter gave deeply interesting account of her winter in the island of Minorca, one of the Balearic Isles She had a villa there and kept house in what she described as an earthly paradise in the capital city of Palma, on a hillside.

The Saracens took possession of this island two hundred years before the reign of Ferdinand and Isabella in Spain. The Moors (or Saracens) had a very highly developed civilization while most of Europe was still in barbarian darkness, and in these islands are still the evidence of their beautiful buildings, in remains of old palaces, cathedrals, and especially their exquisite villas, with the gardens which Mrs Carter was chiefly concerned with in her descriptions, illustrating her remarks with some lovely photographs.

The Villa Alfabia she made most vivid, painting a picture in words of the picturesque and partly ruined terraces, where very old plants and shrubs riot in forgotten corners Sheets of the deepest purple iris have for centuries grown as wild flowers over the island and where they spread over a hillside, the rich dark color was varied with the brilliant glow of the yellow iris, the acacia and the oranges hanging from the trees Flowering almond trees were all about and from the garden one looked down over a great stretch of greenish blue sea

Another garden described was that of the Villa Raxa (pronounced "Rasha") where one of the features of the beautiful and very old terraces is a priceless balustrade, which is also a runway for the water This garden had many rivulets and enchanting tiny waterways, with a wonderful view of the sea The gardens of the monastery of the Val de Mosa held a marvelously delicate and wonderfully carved stone cloister, of which pictures were shown Here in giving the Christian influence on the garden art, as she had in the representation of the Moorish garden architecture, the speaker gave a poetically sympathetic impression of both types of historic development in a climate where for centuries both art and architecture had their expression on in outdoor living The tiny individual gardens of the monks were gems

Later in the spring Mrs Carter visited the annual flower show of Holland at Haarlem. This was essentially a bulb display, and entered by the great commercial growers. There were thousands of varieties, of infinite range of color, and literally millions of specimens, exhibited where they were rooted in partly shaded places and in sunshine, the bulbs for sale, often at five dollars apiece and more for rare specimens. In trying to locate the grower of one peculiarly fine specimen, Mrs. Carter visited his plantation not far from Haarlem and saw how they are grown and hybridized. Glass houses are built right over the ground beds, and under acres of glass the experimenting goes on. The grower doubled his huge fish and easily (without touching) put it down into the open flower of one rare variety

Among other business transacted at the meeting, it was decided to hold the annual flower market of the Ulster Garden Club on Academy Green June 16, if fair. If that day is rainy, then the fair will be held June 17

There was a unanimous expression of enthusiastic appreciation of the president's description of her winter.

Many Kinds of Poultry Feeds

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Geneva, N. Y., June 4.—Poultry feeds offered for sale in New York differ widely in composition and cost, depending on the purpose for which they are intended, says the chemist in charge of the inspection of commercial feeding stuffs at the State Experimental Station here, where an examination of 252 samples of poultry feeds has just been completed.

Poultry feeds may be divided into several classes, such as laying mashes, chick growing mashes, chick starters, special chick meals, chick fattening mashes and scratch feeds, says this official, each combination containing ingredients which are believed to serve best the purpose for which the feed is sold.

Dried Buttermilk and Meat Scrap.

"Each of these special mixtures is characterized by its own particular combination of ingredients," says the station chemist, "and the price varies accordingly, depending upon materials used. The high cost of most poultry feeds is due chiefly to the use of dried buttermilk and of meat scrap.

"The ingredients commonly found in laying mashes are wheat bran, wheat middlings, linseed oil meal, corn gluten feed, corn meal, ground oats, alfalfa meal, meat scrap, fish meal and dried buttermilk. Such mixtures have a selling price ranging from $49 to $100 per ton and average about $62.

"The so-called Cornell Poultry Mash, sold extensively by retail feed merchants throughout the state, consists essentially of equal parts by weight of wheat bran, wheat middlings, corn meal, ground oats and meat scrap. Practically all of the unlicensed laying mashes analyzed were the 'Cornell' ration, but the fact that this formula is recommended by the college of agriculture does not exempt the dealer or manufacturer from the provisions of the feeding stuffs law which requires the registration and licensing of all feeding stuffs offered for sale in the state, together with a statement as to the composition of the mixture.

"Laying mashes contain the highest percentages of protein, fat and fiber of any of the poultry feeds, while the growing mashes contain somewhat less and the chick starters still less. The last two usually contain bone meal or calcium carbonate or both of these materials. A typical 'chick starter' includes dried buttermilk feed, oat meal, wheat middlings, corn meal, wheat meal, and bone meal, although in some cases a small amount of meat scrap or meat meal is added."

This Simple Finish Can Be Easily Learned by Home Dressmakers.

Bound buttonholes are tailored touches that are seen on many of the smart sports frocks. It will pay the home dressmaker to learn to make this simple finish which is both practical and ornamental. Binding buttonholes does not require the expert skill of a professional if you are willing to take a little extra care to make them neatly until you have mastered the technic.

To make a bound buttonhole, first baste on the right side a strip of bias material about two inches longer than the length of the buttonhole and one and one-half inches wider over the place where the buttonhole is to be made, placing the right side of the bias material to the right side of the garment. If the binding material is soft or apt to stretch use a straight instead of bias piece for binding. Mark the place and length of the buttonhole with a pencil line or basting stitches. Stitch all around this line, making the two rows of stitching three-sixteenths to one-fourth inch apart and turning square corners at the end of the buttonhole. Cut exactly in the middle between the two rows of stitching to within almost one-eighth inch of each end. From these points make cuts toward each corner. Remove the basting and push the binding through to the wrong side. Fold so that binding is even on both sides and edges just touch; baste and stitch on the right side on the very edge of the fold that joins the binding. If material is soft or if machine stitching is not desired a straight strip of cambric or lawn should be basted to the under side of the garment before the buttonhole is made. This stays the material and the binding when pushed through can be fastened to the strip with running stitches.

The same principles apply in making bound pockets. The piece for binding usually is cut wider to allow for the wider binding. The little slot pockets are merely elongated buttonholes with a lining. The pocket lining should be about half an inch longer when finished than the opening. The French seam should be on the outside of the pocket to insure smoothness. The portion of the pocket that is attached to the upper side of the opening should be an inch longer than the lower or front piece and should be the same material as that of the body of the garment, as it is exposed when the pocket is pulled open. If the fabric is too heavy to use for the entire side of the pocket, any lightweight material suitable for lining may be used and a small piece of the dress fabric applied at the top where it will show. In attaching the pocket lining (which for a straight pocket will look very much like a small sack turned the wrong side out), the amateur will experience very little difficulty if she sews it in place by hand with half-back stitches.

Black and White Frock Always Gives Service

After all is said and done, there is really nothing smarter than black and white, and a frock of this magpie combination may be worn ten times to five when a gown in a bright color is suitable. For the woman of limited income the black-and-white gown is a fashion life-saver. If it is sufficiently smart, and it usually is, it may appear on almost any occasion and still give the effect of being worn for the first time.

The versatility of these black-and-white costumes is amazing, but much of their difference and all of their distinction lie in the skill with which the two tones are put together. If there is too great an area of white on a black frock, or black placed ill-advisedly on a white gown, the result is hopeless frumpiness, but on the other hand just an accent of black or a piping of white will lift a model from the class of mediocrity to that of smart distinction.

Hats Topped With Flowers

Topped with flowers in matching colors, the new shaded hats in lovely pastel tones reveal the tendency to use more trimming but to employ it with the greatest skill and discretion.

Bright Jabots

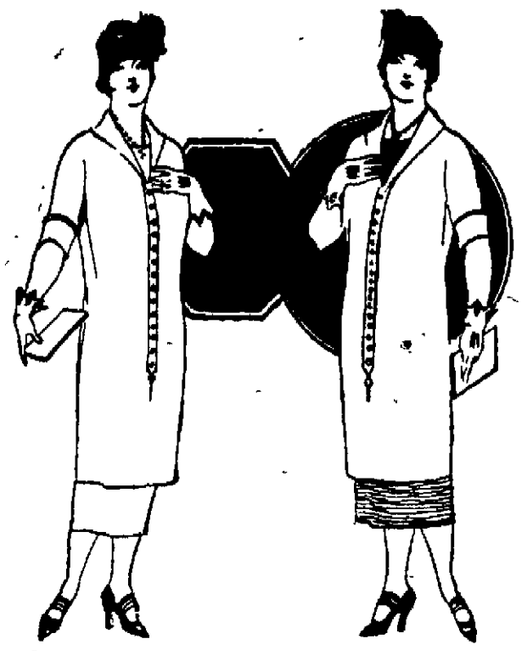
Accomplishment

The fact is that to do anything in this world that is worth doing we must not stand back shivering and thinking of the cold and danger, but jump in and scramble through as well as we can.—Sidney Smith.

"INDIVIDUALITY OF DRESS"

Tunic Dress In One Color Always Best For Large Woman



"Large figures can't wear tunic dresses," is the dictum issued by many a dressmaker, who explains that at any style which cuts the height of figure is unbecoming. This is not entirely true in regard to the tunic, however, for the large woman may wear this style if the underpart is of the same material as the rest of the dress and if the tunic underpart is also pulled in so that it is quite a little bit tighter than the upper part.

RETURNING STYLISTS COMMENT ON COLORFUL NEGLIGEES

Some fashion arbiters just returning from Paris report that there is a trend toward richer materials for negligees, with the tailored note assuming an important place.

The highly favored silhouette for negligees is one which pulls in snugly at the hips and tapers in as it nears the hem, elaboration finding its chief expression in sleeve treatments, which go in for decidedly decorative ideas.

The accepted high shades of the season have been adopted both in lingerie and negligees, it is reported. A significant new color is one which is termed "petunia," described as verging from purple into the deeper wine tones.

Some very effective negligees were seen in Paris, developed on severe lines. Lustrous velvets, metallic cloths, and brocades were used in their styling, with a contrastingly luxurious note supplied by novel sleeves. The latter sometimes appeared in billowy chiffons and georgettes, and were at other times intricately decorated.

The quasi-tailored influence is also evident in underwear. Some of the finest and most adaptable garments for American women are trimmed in delicate net. When lace is the trimming medium, it is in the form of fine insets, not too lavishly applied.

STRAIGHT-FROM-THE-SHOULDER AND OTHER FLARES

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

Topcoats are not usually a timely June topic, or a May one either, for that matter. This season a combination of out-of-the-ordinary weather and an extraordinary interest in coats has brought about a condition which seems to imply that coats are to be a dog-day necessity as well as a mid-winter one.

The coat with a flare has met with such spontaneous response that more daring interpretations are, of course, being launched. Encouraged by Lanvin's success with her taffeta coat with its straight-from-the-shoulder flare, others are designing along these lines.

Striking Red Cloth, Lanvin Model, With Jabot and Godet Insets of Foulard, Polka Dotted in Black and White.

The flare-from-the-shoulder silhouette is being discussed by wiseacres as a fall factor. So be it, having said good-bye to the straightline and gone off on many circuitous routes, fashion is prepared for any number of detours. A flounce, introduced below the hipline, is a compromise between the knee godet and the new shoulder movement, and is favorably regarded.

The straightline coat is by no means neglected, appearing in wrapped models with overlapping front finished with a curved edge. A novel model in the straight coats introduces a hint of flared treatment in fulness that appears above and below short belt emplecements cut in one with the back.

Collar treatments are simple, in standing designs generally, varied by shawl effects. In several instances, wide revers of Directoire type are noted, both of fur in cloth.

Jade Is Deceptive Gem

Pearls and jade are two precious gems widely worn by women today, and one cause of their popularity is the difficulty of telling at a glance the real from the artificial. This is especially true of jade, even when held side by side. There is no perceptible difference, even to an expert, between one piece that costs a few dollars and one that costs hundreds.

Dia at Heine's Grave

Heine, famous German poet, lies buried in Montmartre cemetery. His tomb is the mecca of many love-sick French people. Police records show that every year at least twenty suicides are committed at his grave by unlucky lovers. This year, the number having exceeded the usual average, the police have decided to station a policeman at the grave to prevent young people from taking their lives there.

Fire Damages Browne Plant

Blaze in Stock Room of Manufacturing Company's Plant Results in Damage of About $5,000—Employes Discover Blaze Quickly.

Fire at the W. G. Browne Manufacturing Company's plant on Stephan street Wednesday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock caused damage which is placed at from $4,000 to $5,000 by Elva H. Bogart, president of the concern. The fire started on the second floor of a newly erected stock room where boxes and empty pasteboard shipping containers are stored. How the fire started is not known but probably was caused by defective electric light wires or spontaneous combustion. Two men in a nearby room first discovered the fire. They were at work when they looked into the stock room and saw the blaze which was making considerable headway at that time.

The fire was confined to that portion of the building where it started and the loss to the building is placed at about $2,000 and damage to stock will reach $2,500. There was also some loss to goods in the process of manufacture by smoke and water which found its way into the plant. This loss, however, will be small, and none of the machinery of the company was damaged.

The loss is covered by insurance.

President Elva H. Bogart stated that the cause of the fire could not be ascertained. The two men who were at work nearby were not and had not been smoking and so far as known no one had been in that portion of the building where the firs started for some time. He attributed the fire to defective wires or spontaneous combustion.

Cutting Timber Faster Than Replacement Leads To War On Waste In Nation's Industries

LOUIS J. TABER. JOHN W. BLODGETT

Encouragement of national surveys to ascertain the extent of wood waste in timber-using industries and to determine methods of halting it, is a chief objective of the Committee on Wood Utilization just formed to combat a situation aggravated by the cutting of timber tracts four times faster than they can be replaced.

A program of waste elimination in the wood-using and other industries designed to obtain full use of timber after it leaves the forest and to co-ordinate American industry to that commendable project, is now being planned by the committee which Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover has agreed to head as chairman. An anonymous gift to aid in financing the movement has been made and active work is now under way.

Louis J. Taber, Master of the National Grange and John W. Blodgett, Chairman of the Central Committee on Lumber Standards, shown above, are members of the committee which seeks by next fall to have inaugurated a waste prevention program.

Immediate checking of wood waste in industry is necessary in the best interests of the nation, the committee agreed in organizing. It comprises representatives of the building and contracting industry, lumber manufacturers and retailers, railways, purchasing agents, the paper and pulp industry, engineers and national farm organizations. It is planned to coordinate industries using wood so that through voluntary co-operation full advantage may be taken of all timber cut with a minimum of waste.

Secretary Hoover impressed upon the committee that timber was being cut four times faster than it is being replaced and that this calls for immediate action.

Old Musical Instrument

Notes of a musical instrument that are believed to have floated in the warm air of Egypt 3,000 years ago were reproduced at the University of Pennsylvania by Prof. Jean B. Beck, who restored a small flute found in the tomb of a noble of the time of the pharaohs. The air enters through slits in the sides of the reeds instead of at the ends, as in modern instruments. Each note and its octave are sounded equally loud at the same time, quite unlike any present day instrument.

Recalling Legislation

A bill which has reached the President may only be recalled by concurrent action of the two houses. Should one of the houses improperly request the return of a bill the President should refuse to return it. The form used is as follows: "Resolved by the house of representatives (the senate concurring), That the President be requested to return to the house of representatives the bill (H. R. ——) (title)." After the concurrent resolution passes both houses it is formally transmitted to the White House.

Influence of Religion

Uncle Toby had a neighbor who was in the habit of working on Sunday, but after a while he joined the church.

One day he met the minister to whose church the man belonged.

"Well, Uncle Toby," said the minister, "do you see any difference in Mr. Smith since he joined the church?"

"Yes," said Uncle Toby, "a great difference. Before when he went to mend the fences on Sunday he carried his ax on his shoulder. Now he carries it under his overcoat."

We talk about people, places and events that have become world-famous in a few hours—through the newspapers.

And while we talk, millions of men and women are also discussing the same topics in all parts of the world—because they are newspaper readers.

"Tell the wide world" or "tell the whole town"—through the newspapers.

That is why newspaper advertising is successful.

Newspaper advertising makes a daily call and exerts a daily influence upon all who read.

Little by Little

The case was that of a street holdup and as it neared the end the prosecutor said impressively: "You see how the rascal assaulted the plaintiff. How could he go to such a length for the paltry sum of a half-dollar?" "Why not?" came from the back of the courtroom. "Half-dollars soon count up."

Band at Parking Ground Saturday

To mark the opening of the new automobile parking grounds in the rear of the R-G-R store on North Front street, some of the uptown business men are arranging to have a band concert given Saturday evening on the grounds. It is expected that later the city authorities will adopt suitable parking ordinances so that the new parking grounds will be used instead of streets in the uptown business sections which become so congested on Saturday nights that traffic is greatly delayed.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Worcester, Mass., June 3.—Johnny Farrell, Quaker Ridge pro, took the lead in the national open golf championship here today when half the field had played the third round, with a total of 214 made possible by a brilliant 69 in his first 18 holes this morning.

Leo Diegel, who led the field with Willie McFarlane at the end of the first two rounds, slipped badly on the third round today, taking 38-39-77 making his total for the three rounds 218.

He got away to a bad start when he dropped two shots to par at the short fourth hole.

Bobby Jones, Atlanta, formerly national amateur golf champion, played his third round in 70 strokes today, giving him a total of 217 for 54 holes.

Colonials Are Going Strong

Seven straight games, not one of which could be rightfully termed a set-up, is the present record of the Colonial Baseball Club. This brand of ball being displayed by the local representatives is something to boast about. The management at the early part of the season stated that in accordance with the amount of support given high priced players would be secured. As is well known good players are highly paid and there is always a ready market. Local sport followers and lovers of the national pastime are hoping the local club will be better supported at future games. Those who have witnessed games so far this season at the Fair Grounds have been very well pleased.

With the addition of new players it is most certain that Kingston will have as representative a baseball team as any in recent years.

Today at Amsterdam the Colonials play the first game of the series with the Chappie Johnson All Stars. The second game will be played Saturday at the Fair Grounds.

Dined in Manner of Centuries Long Past

As most of his readers know, Pierre Loti carried his love of the exotic into his own home, dividing his house, room by room, to represent various epochs of architecture, so that one could pass successively from Egyptian and Arab art through the Italian renaissance and eventually appreciate the severe graces of medieval France, says Living Age.

In these odd yet picturesque surroundings, Loti loved to receive his friends and delighted in devising fantastic entertainments. The Journal des Debats prints his invitation to a dinner which was to be served comme sous le roi Louis XI:

"You love times gone past and perhaps will allow yourself to be ever so little entertained by this faithful reproduction of the Fifteenth century. There will be some thirty of us. Let us dine by the light of pine torches in a rough-hewn gothic hall powdered with the dust of centuries. We shall eat the dishes of the period—roast heron and roast hedgehog shall be brought by pages to the sound of the horn and the cornemuse. One of my minstrels will chant among other things a villanelle by Francois Coppee.

"No one may come except in the strict costume of the period. The guests are begged to dress as provincial noblemen, as chevaliers, or as bourgeois. We shall also receive pilgrims and minstrels. There will be a special table for beggars and ragamuffins if any present themselves.

"The hall will be rather dimly lighted and guests are requested to choose their costumes in dull colors. They must have an air suitable to people who had been sleeping for the last 400 years in the clothing that they wear. They are warned that forks had not been invented in the Fifteenth century and that they will have to get along without them."

LIBRARY IN PARIS YIELDS TREASURE

Map That May Have Been Made by Columbus.

A scholar who died recently, Henry Vignaud, after 60 years of study of Columbus' life, according to an article in "L'Illustration," and translated for the Milwaukee Journal, came to the conclusion that Columbus never said anything authentic about himself.

His great plan, which was born out of meditations about the shape of the earth, remains in the field of legends. To dissipate all doubts it was necessary to find a document of a date earlier than the discovery of America. Mr. Vignaud says that such a document did exist at the National library in Paris. Under the insignificant name of "A Portuguese Map of the Sixteenth Century," he found a real hidden treasure. There was no date, nor any name of the cartographer.

Two maps were combined on an old piece of parchment, a map of the world on a small scale and one of Africa and Europe on a large scale. Africa extended down to the Cape of Good Hope. The map of the world contained no trace of America and its islands. The cape had been discovered in 1488 and America in 1492. The document must have been produced some time between those two dates.

It was not a Portuguese document. The archipelago of Cape Verde was annotated on this map as follows: "These islands are called Capo Verde in Italian and Cape Verde in Latin. They were discovered by a man from Genoa called Antoine de Noli."

The author of the map was therefore an Italian and Genoa was well known to him. Another item is still more striking. The cartographer knew Iceland, "Frislanda, an island full of mountains, snow and ice, called Islande in the local language and Thile in Latin. On account of the cold, the people there eat nothing but frozen fish." This very same comment was made by Christopher Columbus in another document. It is more than probable that Columbus himself drew the maps, for all that he knew of the earth is contained on them.

"The world is a globe. The map must be drawn in one plane, but it must be visualized as a sphere." This sentence is written in a handwriting which is undoubtedly that of Christopher Columbus.

Sounds of Trees.

"When I was a boy and hunted squirrels in the woods where factories now stand in the city, I used to study the mystifying sounds made by the trees," said Hiram Hunter, deputy United States marshal assigned to Judge Arthur J. Tuttle's court. "The queer sounds common to all woods I eventually learned were caused by the wind among the branches of trees, and did not emanate from the spirits of the departed Indians, as little boys were then told by their elders. One old oak tree that stood near where the northern city limits are now was known to us boys as the "spirit tree." It gave forth a dirge-like sound and subsequent investigation revealed that the horizontal limb of a maple tree was rubbed against the trunk when the wind stirred the branches."—Detroit News.

Advice on Shoes

Change your shoes and hose every day in warm weather, to keep shoes, hose and feet in good condition, advises one shoe dealer. Light wool or silk and wool hose are best in summer, he says, for they absorb the moisture. The feet should be washed daily in lukewarm water, preferably at night, and always dried well before putting on hose again. Lastly, he advises a shoe shine fresh each morning, to preserve the shoes. They are better shined in the morning, he says, when free of moisture or perspiration. Thus cared for, and permitted to dry slowly when wet, the shoes' lifetime will be extended 50 per cent, he states. The use of shoe-trees is advised to assist in holding the shoes' natural shape.

Stingy Man

A young man in the city has a favorite colored barber who has cut his hair regularly for some time. Last Saturday when the young man was getting his usual hair cut, a friend who is noted for his closeness was also getting some work done in another chair. When his friend left, the colored barber asked his customer whether that man who had just left was a particular friend of his?

"Oh, yes, I know him quite well," answered the young man.

"Well sah," said the barber, "that man, he so stingy that he wouldn't give a dime to see Moses running up Mount Sinai backward."—Indianapolis News.

College Cabin

"Your American liner, Leviathan, advertises its steerage as 'College Cabin.' The advertisement reads:

"College cabin," Mr. Bridges went on, "is all that our post-war intelligentsia, our students and professionals, can hope for any more. You notice that poets are left out. Poets are not even up to college cabin."

The laureate laughed fiercely and ended:

"Poets are born, not paid."

Disestablishing Churches

The bill disestablishing the Church of Ireland was passed by the British parliament in the summer of 1869, when Gaidstone was prime minister. The Church of Scotland is the established church of that kingdom. The endowments of the church from all sources, including manses and glebes, amount to about £410,000 a year, and the voluntary contributions to about £765,000. Out of the funds the church pays its ministers and meets other charges. Under the Welsh church acts of 1914 and 1919 the church in Wales and Monmouthshire was disestablished as from March 31, 1920.—Family Herald.

May Return to Executions

There have been no executions in Berlin since 1921, and it is now being asserted that the number of brutal murders has increased in the German capital because of the disposition of the courts to impose sentences of life imprisonment instead of death. Berlin has no executioner and the discussions in the papers as to the advisability of restoring capital punishment have brought more than 100 applications from men who want to serve as hangmen.

Norway Testing Polar Planes

Monoplanes to be Sent Saturday in Search of Amundsen and Ellsworth, North Pole Explorers—Scientists Doubtful of Relief Expedition Value.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Copenhagen, June 4.—The Norwegian naval station at Horten, Norway, expected to test today the two monoplanes which, if satisfactory, will be taken to Spitzbergen Saturday to begin a search for the missing Amundsen-Ellsworth North Pole flyers, comprising two aeroplanes and six men.

Both monoplanes are equipped with wireless so that the Norwegian government constantly will be in communication with the commanding officers and can send additional assistance quickly if the Amundsen-Ellsworth party is found in distress.

It is proposed to divide the territory in such a way that there would be no possibility of missing the party. The territory would be divided between the Norwegian expedition, the French expedition under Captain Charcot and the American expedition under Cptain Donald B. Mac Millan.

Today ended the fourteenth day since Amundsen and his associate, Lieutenant Ellsworth, Ohio aviator, "hopped off" from Spitzbergen, an island east of Greenland and owned by Norway. No word has come from them.

Social Value of Relief Flight.

Oslo, Norway, June 4.—Scientists interested in exploration were inclined to doubt, they said today, the value of the Norwegian government's aeroplane relief expedition which is to seek the Amundsen-Ellsworth North Pole flyers.

They based their doubt on the government's order to the relief flyers that they should proceed only as far as the edge of the ice and not attempt to go farther.

Sues Phoenicia Man for $20,000

Because she was hurled through the windshield of her husband's car when it was run into headon by the auto of LeRoy E. DeVall of Phoenicia, at the Aspetong turn in the Vails Gate road on September 11, 1923, plaintiff thereby sustaining a fractured skull which caused temporary inversion of sight, Mrs. Viola K. Post of Balmville asks $20,000 damages in a suit which is being tried before Justice A. S. Tompkins and a jury in Supreme Court in Newburgh. Her husband, Willis E. Post, sued for $10,000 for loss of his wife's services.

Mr. Post was the only witness to testify Wednesday morning, he claiming DeVall was drunk when he caused the collision. He said he saw lights zigzagging down the road and promptly pulled over to the side of the road and off the macadam completely. DeVall, he said, failed to make the right angle turn properly but drove across the road and into the ditch near the Post flivver, running into it with terrific force.

George Rowley, a deputy sheriff, happened along and he arrested DeVall, charging him before Justice of the Peace Patrick F. Greaney with driving an auto while intoxicated. DeVall pleaded guilty to the charge the next morning.

Rowley also took Mrs. Post to St Luke's hospital where she was a patient for two weeks. Dr. E. O. Mitchell attended her and he is authority for the statement that the woman suffered inversion of sight, that is, for a time objects appeared to have turned upside down.

Cats Without Tails

In most Manx cats the tails are represented merely by a tuft of hair without any remnant of bone. This strain is met with in many parts of Russia and there is a very general opinion that it originally came from Japan. Unless the jungle cat, which is a nearly whole-colored species, can claim the position, the ancestry of these Manx-Malay cats is still unknown.

The Folks Who Know

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THERE are four kinds of folks who know;
The first know not at all.
And very frankly tell you so—
Yes, when they can't recall
The name of this, the name of that,
Own up, and let it go at that.

The second class will wink the eye
And try with hems and haws
To make you think the right reply
They do not give because,
Although they know, it might be well,
Perhaps be better, not to tell.

The third reply right off the reel,
Whatever you inquire,
And love their knowledge to reveal
To student, sage and sire—
Know ev'rything that comes along,
And almost always know it wrong.

The fourth have studied long and hard,
Experience and book,
Have learned with caution to regard
The things at which they look;
And men like that will tell to you
Not what they know but think they do.

And, of the four, the first and last
Will answer you the best;
The first will never lead you past
The truth; the last will test
The truth before your very eyes,
For naught is certain to the wise.

Your Health

By ANDREW F. CURRIER, M. D.

OCCUPATIONAL DISEASES

IT IS only within a few years that these diseases have been grouped and classified, though many of them were recognized and studied two centuries ago—that is, in 1713, by Ramazzini, who observed the disastrous effects of their occupation upon metal diggers, gilders, chemists and tin workers.

Farmers suffer from digestive disease, from poorly cooked food and overeating, though their occupation is one of the healthiest.

Fishermen suffer from exposure, and sometimes from too exclusive a diet of fish; sailors suffer from tuberculosis owing to bad quarters, poor food, bad habits, etc.

Lung disease, anemia, tuberculosis and skin disease attack tanners, blacksmiths, miners, bakers, millers and knife-grinders.

Bad air and inhalation of particles of dust injure their lungs, teeth, mucous membrane and skin.

Workers in copper, lead, arsenic, phosphorus, mercury, tin, zinc and brass are frequently seriously poisoned by the metals with which they are occupied, the result being often a fatal one.

Railroad workers have rheumatism, eye-strain, kidney disease (from constant shaking) and they are always exposed to the danger of serious or fatal injury.

Workers in tunnels and caissons under high atmospheric pressure suffer from blood and nerve diseases, while those who work at great elevation, mountain climbers, aviators and others, have lung diseases on account of diminished air pressure.

Bleachers who work in chlorine, sulphur and acids, aniline dye workers, starch makers and chemical workers in general, are apt to suffer from diseases of the lungs and the skin.

Athletes, and those who work in strained and trying positions, very often have diseases of the heart and lungs, while rupture and aneurism are of common occurrence among porters, blacksmiths and draymen.

Boilermakers and riveters often become deaf from exposure to constant noise.

Vision is impaired in those who work under strong light, particularly if it is unsteady.

Brewers and saloonkeepers have diseases of the lungs, liver and kidneys, as the result of excesses in alcohol.

Flat-feet, varicose veins and constipation are common ills with cooks, waiters, house-servants, policemen and salesmen.

Glass-blowers, potters and band-players often have emphysema of the lungs, and those who work in india-rubber and inhale carbon bisulphide, or those who inhale benzine and turpentine have headache, poor sight and hearing, and intestinal cramps

Cabmen, commercial travelers and public officials are frequent sufferers from indigestion; while instrument-players, typewriter operators and bookkeepers have cramp and paleness of the hands.

Printers are often tuberculous; and shoemakers, tailors and sedentary workers are victims of hemorrhoids, constipation and indigestion.

In many of these cases, disease is preventable, which is a fact every working man and woman should consider. No constitution is so rugged that it may not break down when the laws of health are persistently disregarded.

Prudes of the Past

Author Frank Harris, the guest of honor at a literary banquet in New York, said in his speech of acknowledgment:

"American literature used to be very prudish. We're changed all that, thank goodness. But our prudishness in the past was so extreme that it reminds me of the girls' boarding school.

"The principal of a girls' boarding school was taking her charges through a picture gallery.

When half way through she halted and said:

"'Attention, young ladies! The next apartment is devoted to the nude. In passing the door you will all please lower your eyes, avert your heads, quicken your pace and blush."—Detroit Free Press.

Back to Normalcy

Ole Swenson, after having lived by himself and prepared his own meals for years, had taken a wife. Mrs. Swenson proceeded to live with her husband for the better part of two months, after which she ran away to the city. "Well, Ole," said a friend some time after the lady's departure, "are you sorry she went?"

"No," replied Ole. "No? Why not?" "Well," was the reply, "she was always getting in the way when I was cooking."

Clouds Provide Mount With Its Tablecloth

One of the most interesting sights to be seen in cloudland is the "spreading of the tablecloth" over Table mountain in South Africa. When a northerly or southeasterly wind sweeps in from the southern ocean the mountain barrier defies it upward, the moist air cools by expansion and a dense white cloud spreads over the summit, the Cleveland Plain Dealer says.

It is particularly striking because a perfectly cloudless sky generally prevails at the same time over the surrounding country. The cloud forms a level layer and pours over the leeward edge of the mountain, dissolving and disappearing at a fairly definite level. Thus the picture of a "tablecloth" is complete.

The wind that causes the cloud is always more or less violent, and after making the sweep of the mountain it descends in a cataract into the city of Cape Town, which it fills with dust and uproar. The suddenness with which the cloud forms is a source of danger to persons who make the ascent of Table mountain.

Wisdom in Choice

A doctor who had taken up as his specialty the treatment of skin diseases was asked by a friend how he happened to select that branch of medicine. "There were three perfectly good reasons," replied the physician. "My patients never get me out of bed at night; they never die and they never get well."—Medical Review of Reviews.

St. Mary's Boy Scouts' Doings

St. Mary's Boy Scouts held a bean supper at the school hall Monday evening, under the supervision of Scout Master William Jordan. The menu consisted principally of beans with the following additions: potato salad, bread, hot dogs and rolls, ice cream and cake and soda water. The supper was prepared by Mary McNamara, Catherine McNamara, Angela McNamara, Mrs. William Jordan and Mrs. Blanschan.

Colonel Johnson of Saugerties, representing the National Boy Scout Headquarters, gave a very interesting talk to the Scouts on Boy Scout activities during the summer months.

The St. Mary's Scouts meet every Monday evening at the school hall. Next meeting Colonel Johnson will again be present to give another talk on Scouting.

Plans for the summer activities, which includes baseball, camp, etc., are now being formulated. A junior Scout baseball team has already been organized. The team will engage in its first contest Saturday, at Hasbrouck Park. Following is the probable line-up for the first game: B. Cullum, p.; Kelly, c.; Jordan, 1b.; Lenihan, 2b.; W. Scully, 3b.; Fogarty, ss.; Rafferty, lf.; Ostrander, cf.; J. Falvey, rf.

Any teams between the ages of 10 to 12, desiring games with this combination should send their challenges to the Rev. J. F. Duffy, St. Mary's rectory, city.

Final Spurt in C. of C. Drive

Workers Prepare for Strenuous Work Friday Which Is Expected to Carry Membership Campaign to Desired Goal.

Forty additional members were reported at the noon day luncheon today of the team workers in the Chamber of Commerce membership drive, making a grand total to date of 430 members and leaving 170 memberships yet to go to reach the desired total of a membership of six hundred.

Instructions were given the workers asking all captains to get in touch with their fellow workers and have them report promptly at 9:30 o'clock Friday morning at the Chamber of Commerce for the final spurt that will put the campaign over the top.

It is believed that through the efforts of the teams on Friday an additional seventy members will be secured and the other one hundred necessary will be furnished by the large interests which have been slow in responding.

The privilege to free lance was also given the workers from noon today until noon Friday, leaving each worker free to sign up any one desired. It is expected, however, that every team worker will report promptly Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock so that the teams can go out intact.

It is understood that Captain Robert Boettger will be at the luncheon Friday as the guest of the Chamber of Commerce. He is vice president of the Yonkers Trust Company and president of the Chamber of Commerce of that city.

The high school boys handled the meeting, which was a combined meeting of the Kiwanis Club and the Chamber of Commerce. Meyer Koplovitz presided and gave an interesting address on obedience to our laws and respect for the constitution of our country. During the serving of the luncheon the high school orchestra rendered a selected musical program.

The score up to noon today is as follows:

Police Look for Accomplice

Believe Florence Kane's Murderer Was Not Alone—Boys Saw Negro Signaling to Someone Who Answered.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 4.—Police investigating the murder of Florence Kane, whose body was found last Friday morning in a vacant lot one block from her home in Brooklyn, today were working on the theory that the murderer had an accomplice.

Two boys told police they trailed a negro on the night of the murder and heard him signaling to another man whom they did not see but who answered the signal.

Police said the boys told them the man they trailed resembled William Bransfield, the big negro janitor who is being held.

Bransfield's alibi that he did not leave the apartment house of which he is janitor all day Thursday or Thursday night, was corroborated by his wife, Trixie, said by police to be a white woman.

Four young women, each of whom said they had either seen or been attacked by a negro in the last few weeks, near the vacant lot where Miss Kane was found, were taken to Raymond Street jail to look as Bransfield.

They were asked to pick out the man they had seen from a line of 14 negro prisoners.

CHINESE TURKESTAN

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

CHINESE or East Turkestan, the latest country to attract an American scientific and big game hunting expedition, is with the possible exception of Tibet, the most inaccessible region of considerable extent outside the frigid zones. Tibet is a huge lofty plateau from which rises range after range of mountains. It is this huge wide Tibetan mountain mass which blocks the road from the south to Chinese Turkestan. To the southwest is the sea of high mountain peaks of the Karagorum mountains on the northern Kashmir border. Due west lies "the Roof of the World," the famous Pamir region; and from the Pamirs the Tian Shan range and its connecting links to the Altai mountains sweep off to the northeast separating the country from Russian Asia. Inside this major barrier the Tian Shans curve round enfolding Chinese Turkestan on the north and almost completely walling it round with a rim of the world's loftiest mountains.

It is only in the East that an opening exists to Chinese Turkestan, and that is across extensive desert regions dotted with low mountains, which extend off to China proper. Geography, then, has conspired to make this region a Chinese province, by effectually fencing it from the rest of the world and by facing its one door toward China; and this in spite of the fact that the great majority of its inhabitants are not and never have been Chinese.

Chinese Turkestan is roughly 600 miles wide, north and south, and something more than 1,000 miles long, east and west. Inside the mountain walls the land slopes rapidly down to what seems a very low, level plain which constitutes more than half of the 354,000 square miles of the country. Although more than 20,000 feet lower than the highest peaks that tower over it, this plain is still several thousand feet above sea level. Even the Lop Nor, the salt marsh-lake into which the greater part of the drainage of Chinese Turkestan finds its way, lies 2,675 feet above the sea. Two hundred miles north of the Lop Nor is a small Asiatic "Death Valley" 330 feet below sea level. Mus Tagh Ata, highest of the country's peaks, reaches a height of 24,400 feet; so that there is a vertical range of more than four and a half miles.

Much of It Is Desert.

The snow-clad mountains of the Pamir region and the Tian Shans send down great quantities of water which forms the Tarim river, Chinese Turkestan's one great drainage system. Beginning in the southwest this river flows near the western and northern rim of the great plain, picking up additional streams and torrents in its progress, and finally empties into the Lop Nor near the eastern edge of the country. The heart of Chinese Turkestan, within the arc of the Tarim, is a great desolate desert, the Takla Makan, uninhabitable and seldom penetrated. Since the beginning of history important towns have existed along the northern and western rim of the country—through which contact with the East is maintained. Among the more important of these are some well known by name even to those unfamiliar with Chinese Turkestan such as Yarkand, Kashgar and Aksu.

On the south side of the Takla Makan desert numerous streams flow from the great Tibetan mountain rampart. Most of these streams never enter the Tarim drainage system, but lose themselves in the desert. One, the Khotan river, reaches the Tarim in times of flood, but at other seasons comes to an end in the greedy sands many miles short of the big river. As on the northern and western rims of the desert, oases dot the southern rim, their lands irrigated from the many small streams that flow from the mountains on the border of Tibet. In this southern group of oases, Khotan is the most important and the most famous city.

The great majority of the inhabitants of Chinese Turkestan are a mixture of Aryans and central Asiatic Turks. The country is simply a conquered province of China and there are only enough Chinese to hold the most important official positions, to garrison the chief cities, and to control certain lines of trade. Although the Chinese have been in control off and on for many centuries the people have never adopted the Chinese tongue nor have the officials learned the Jagatai Turkish language most generally spoken. All Chinese officials are provided with interpreters.

To the Chinese, East Turkestan is Sinkiang, or "The New Province," a name which advertises the westward extension of Chinese conquest many centuries ago. Sinkiang embraces also the division Sungaria, just north of Chinese Turkestan. The governor of the entire province, the "Futai," has his capital at Urumchi.

Ostentation Counts.

Because of the prevailing ideas of class importance and official prestige, European travelers in Chinese Turkestan are accorded consideration in proportion to the ostentation with which they travel. Those who walk are looked down upon. Everyone of any importance rides, and the better the mount the greater the respect directed to the rider. Uniforms also bring increased respect—more or less in proportion to their showiness. One traveler tells how he was rated as a very important personage, indeed, because when he called on officials he always got himself up in golf trousers, black leggings, a bright smoking jacket, and trimmed his hat with bright colored cloth.

The road to Chinese Turkestan from India leads not over a single mountain range and a single pass, but involves crossing a belt of high mountains and deep valleys about 200 miles broad, through several major passes and numerous minor ones. The most direct route leads from Srinagar, capital of Kashmir, as an advance base, north by way of what is sometimes called the Hunza Pass into the Taghdumbash Pamir, the Chinese portion of "the Roof of the World." This road leads over the final barrier between British and Chinese lands close to the point where British, Afghan and Chinese territory have a common corner, and Russian territory lies only about twenty miles away. From the Chinese Pamir, a region whose valleys lie at an altitude of from 10,000 to 12,000 feet, the route runs down some of the headwater streams of the Tarim through a rough mountainous region and foothills, to Yarkand, metropolis of Chinese Turkestan.

The less direct route from Kashmir to Chinese Turkestan leads first to Leh, remote hill town of Ladakh, about 200 miles to the east. From Leh eastward leads an important caravan road into Tibet, while to the north lies the eastern route to Chinese Turkestan. The Karakorum Pass, over 18,000 feet high, the key to this route, is about 100 miles north of Leh. A short distance beyond Chinese territory is reached and the way then leads through a rough country, following river gorges and striking across ridges, to the lowlands. Caravans both to Khotan and Yarkand follow this route, diverging in the latter stages of the journey.

As a traveler approaches Yarkand after a trip through the bleak regions to the south he is impressed by the fertility of the oasis in which this remote metropolis is situated. This is especially true if he arrives at a season when the extensive orchards of apples, pears, peaches, apricots, mulberries and walnuts are in bloom or fruit. The soil is a deep, fertile loess which needs only water to make it exceedingly productive.

Yarkand a Busy Place.

Although a large community, Yarkand is uninteresting. There are no structures of architectural value. The mosques are devoid of beauty and there is a squat sameness to the dwellings. The structures lining the principal streets have "sidewalks" protected by flat thatched projections to afford protection from the sun.

Considerable business is conducted in the bazaars at Yarkand. During the open season in the mountains caravans are constantly coming in from India, China and Russian Turkestan, and leaving for those countries. The various oases of Chinese Turkestan each have characteristic handicraft products, and a selection of these are always available in Yarkand: carpets, rugs, silk and cotton fabrics, metal work, leather goods. Most characteristic of the country are jade ornaments, for the mines of Chinese Turkestan are the most prolific source of jade known to the world. Since conditions in China have been so disturbed in recent years, the output of jade has fallen off markedly. Khotan, being nearer to the mines, is the particular jade center of the country.

Kashgar, a hundred miles to the northwest of Yarkand, has a population only about half as great as Yarkand, but its inhabitants seem more prosperous. Its bazaar is cleaner, its shops better and the streets are wider. Kashgar is not so fortunate, however, in the matter of fertile soil and must import some of its foodstuffs from other oases.

Chinese Turkestan has a scientific interest for ethnologists and a sentimental interest for all Westerners, for it is the reputed early home of the Aryan race.

The Pamirs, which lay for centuries almost a mystical region, became well known during the Nineteenth century due to Russian and British rivalry in that part of the world, and the dispatch by each of surveying parties. When this activity began the Chinese, too, established military posts near their borders. Almost as effectual in clearing up the geography of the region have been the numerous expeditions of big game hunters, chiefly British, who have gone into the region. The world long spoke of the Pamir region as a very high plateau. Marquess Curzon of Keddleston, then an M. P., visited the country in 1894, and was among the first to brand this a misconception, and to describe the Pamirs as very lofty, flat-bottomed mountain valleys, walled in by still more lofty peaks. In spring and summer grass grows luxuriantly on the floors of these valleys, a fact taken advantage of by a few nomad Kirghiz who bring in their flocks for fattening.

Wild sheep and goats, yak, foxes, marmots, lynx, bears, lions, leopards, wolves and wild dogs make up the animal life of the Pamirs. Fish abound in the lakes and numerous birds are found.

Financial and Commercial

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 4.—Stocks of the motor companies were as conspicuous in the reaction of prices in the stock market today as they were in the brisk upward movement in the two previous sessions of this week. When the removal of Maxwell stocks from the trading list obviated the fear of a corner in the undeposited stocks, professional traders turned their attention to the certificates.

Heavy selling of class B certificates accompanied the generally unsettled stock market. The price dropped to 111 for a loss of eight points for the day. Willys Overland preferred declined four points; Mack Trucks was down three; Hudson lost three; Pierce Arrow preferred three; General Motors and Studebaker 1½.

The action of the stock market was in contrast with that of the important commodity markets. Wheat and cotton, after early irregularity, continued the sharp rally which started near the close of yesterday's session.

Crude Rubber reached 78 cents a pound in its steady upward climb. In the foreign exchange market the French franc was again unsettled and dropped 5½ points to a new low, 0419½.

American Can and other industrial leaders yielded a few points on fairly heavy selling pressure shortly after the noon period. A number of the specialty stocks dropped five points or more on a small volume of transactions.

American Agricultural Chemical preferred dropped six points at 51; Famous Players was down 2½ and Harvester last three. American Ice continued to move forward and reached a new high at 112.

The market was dull and inactive in the fourth hour. Industrial stocks gradually regained their former positions. A few of the railroad and oil stocks made a bid for speculative interest. Coppers were unsettled with Anaconda back to 36⅞; against the week's high price of 40. Rails were inactive and slightly reactionary.

Use Starvation As New Weapo[n]

Shanghai Quiet After Wednesday Disorders—50,000 Chinese Workers Join Strikers.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Shanghai, June 4.—Fifty thousand additional Chinese workers joined the city wide strike today, including employes of a British cigarette company, the Chinese staffs of practically all of the foreign banks and employes of foreign shops and offices.

Minor disorders were reported but there were no serious clashes.

Starvation appeared as a weapon of the Chinese strikers in their campaign against all foreign...

A quiet which contained a greater menace than the noisy demonstrations held the city today.

With fresh reinforcements of sailors and marines from the foreign warships in the harbor landing to cope with new outbreaks, the Chinese apparently realized that they could not hope to drive out the foreigners with violence.

The campaign swelters under a merciless June sun. All deliveries of ice have been halted. Provisions hoarded against such emergency have started to decay. Meanwhile hundreds of foreign volunteers are working shovelling coal to keep the foreign settlements supplied with electric power and laboring in the other utility plants.

Ancient and Modern Culture

To compare ancient Egypt, or the Valley of the Kings, and all they have bequeathed to us, brought to light from time to time by excavation, with material discovery, such as steam, electricity and the like, through other scientific channels would be ridiculous. But archeological discoveries as the harnessing of the powers to our uses are the only real advantage other than the science of medicine, that modern civilization may claim over that of the ancients. Again, though we cannot become intimate with those ancient people in their living, by archeological research we can become intimate with the dead and the material they have bequeathed us. As a result of such research, we find that culture is a way of intellectual development and the arts in general were in those ancient times in many ways higher than they are today. In fact, modern progress in the mechanical sciences and industrialism generally are largely responsible for the complete eclipse of spontaneous and conscious artistic production. If thereby we get such ultimate results as cubism and futurism, then archeological research will show that the arts are best without our mechanical and industrial progress.—Howard Carter in Current History Magazine.

Tree Planting

A request from the American Tree Planting association for the name of the "champion tree planter" in each state is a reminder of the great growth of the arboricultural movement in the United States since J. Sterling Morton first proposed an Arbor day. The American Tree association says that it has enrolled 70,000 registered tree planters, but this is far from constituting our tree planting strength. The effort to establish avenues of shade along the principal highways is participated in by many individuals and hundreds of local organizations.

The association meanwhile furnishes an excellent undertaking by publishing instructions on tree planting so the veriest novice can understand.—Portland Oregonian.

Fiddling Work!

A certain young New Zealander, six or seven years old, is very inquisitive. One day he was asking how he came to be here: "Mother, who made me?" The mother replied, "God."

"Who made the horses and cows?"

"God."

"And who made the elephants?"

"Why, God, of course."

A long pause, then: "Well, did God make flies?"

"Why, yes, my son!"

"Humph!" said the boy. "Fiddling work, that!"—Everybody's Magazine.

Strange Tree Fatality

Orel Mullins, twenty-one years old, rancher, was killed recently at ... Mont., by an unusual accident. He felled a tree, which struck a second tree, which fell and hit a third. The third took down a fourth, which fell on the man, killing him. The trees stood in a circle.

Protect the Birds

Theodore Roosevelt said: "It is the duty of every man, woman and child to protect birds." Every one who realizes the incalculable number of insects which even one bird will destroy in a season should be willing to take some pains to protect these charming and useful aerial allies of the farmer and orchardist.

Kingston's Heat Well Over 100

Thermometers Vary According to Location—The Freeman Thermometer Showed 96 Degrees in Shade at Noon—River Bathing Becomes Popular.

According to the thermometer, today was the hottest day so far experienced in Kingston since the warm wave swept over the country earlier in the week. At noon The Freeman thermometer registered 96 degrees, the highest so far registered since the heat wave has held the city in its grip. Wednesday at noon the thermometer registered 88 degrees. The lowest point registered during the night was 74 degrees. Where thermometers were hung in a position exposed to the rays of the sun the mercury climbed to well over the one hundred degree mark.

While today was hotter than Wednesday, there was not as much complaint or comment as every one is becoming more accustomed to the heat wave. Wednesday evening those who had automobiles drove around the Ashokan reservoir or out on the state roads leading out of the city, seeking cool spots. But places were cool only by comparison.

Those who were not so fortunate as to have automobiles, or friends who owned a machine, went for a trolley ride to the bathing beach at Kingston Point and immersed themselves in the waters of the Hudson river.

While the heat has been very oppressive in Kingston, but one fatality has been so far reported. Peter Lemister of Lindsley avenue was prostrated by the heat Wednesday while at work on the Hutton brickyard, and went home, where he died shortly after from the effects of the heat.

Shipyard workers and others employed at out of door work, while they sweltered under the hot rays of the sun, have continued at work.

The weather man promises very slight relief from the heat for tonight, stating that the weather will not be quite so warm.

What has made the heat wave more oppressive is the fact that it followed in the wake of an unusually cool May when it was found necessary to keep heaters running until almost the last of the month in order to make the house comfortable.

Gibbons Plans To Carry Fight

To Gene Tunney Friday Night in 15 Round Bout—Betting Today Was Even as Fighters Workout With Light Exercises.

(By Davis J. Walsh.)

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 4.—Can a fox turn tiger.

In the main that is one of those questions you answer by asking another "why do hens eat garlic?" usually they don't.

The writer, however, witnessed something of a transition from the fox to the tiger on a certain evening last December when Tom Gibbons, clever to the point of being down right unpleasant about it and usually about as vicious as a head waiter, was hit low several times in succession by Kid Norfolk.

Gibbons stepped out of character and forgot to be the fox who baffles the pursuer. He suddenly wanted to be the tiger who pursues and kills and he was. He knocked Norfolk over in a few punches.

The same Gibbons declared today at his Coney Island training camp that he intends to fight Gene Tunney the same way for 15 rounds or less, tomorrow night as he did Kid Norfolk for 15 seconds or more last December.

"I plan to carry the fight to Tunney from first to last," Gibbons said. "They have called me a safety first boxer. Perhaps they will call me something else after tomorrow night."

Gibbons was as serious as rat poison, his almost habitually pleasant face grim, his eyes snapping sparks. He is in wonderful physical condition, better than he was for Dempsey at Shelby.

"They tell me that Tunney has the same idea," the writer interpersed. "Fine," came the reply. "That will make it a real fight."

But Gibbons really has slight faith in Tunney's alleged reformation.

"I expect to have to carry the fight to Tunney," he declared. "From what I have seen and heard, I think he will fight a defensive battle. Well, I'll fool them and him if they expect me to follow suit."

"Don't you fear Tunney's punch, then?" I asked.

No it seemed not.

"That is," he added hastily, "not in the way I would fear Dempsey's or Wills's. But I respect Tunney's hitting just as I would any man's. I'm not going in there swinging with my guard down."

Gibbons was about to indulge in his final workout for the meeting, a series of light exercises lasting less than a half hour. A short walk tomorrow, the weighing in ceremonies and then the long tedious wait for the bell.

Betting today was even, the public having no definite choice for the winner. The loser, in fact, probably will be the man who thinks he is justified in giving odds, either way.

The Planet Mercury

Mercury is the smallest planet, and the nearest to the sun. Owing to its proximity to the sun it is difficult to see it with the naked eye. Its mean distance from the sun is 36,000,000 miles, while that of the earth is about 94,000,000 miles. Mercury completes a revolution of its orbit in 88 days; it is about 3,000 miles in diameter; and its mass is only about one-eighteenth that of the earth.

Signifies Perfection

Emeralds are precious stones but a flawless one is so rare that the expression a "flawless emerald" signifies unattainable perfection.

Tagging Major League Bases

The Red Sox four runs on four hits, the Athletics two runs on nine hits. And that's an excellent way to win and lose a ball game. Ehmke turned in his first Boston victory of the season.

Ring sent the Phillies into the west a first division proposition by pitching the Braves out of a 5 to 4 decision, the Bancroft entry being helpless until the eighth inning.

Bob Meusel's fifth home run within a week staked the Yankees to their second successive victory over the Senators in a 12th inning finish, 6 to 4. Shanks's homer tied the score in the ninth.

The Browns made it three straight over the Indians by clubbing their way through Shaute, Roy and Buckeye to a 7 to 6 verdict.

Hornsby's hammering henchmen made it four straight over the Reds, 7 to 3, and kept the new manager's record clean. Dickerman held the Reds to four hits

Five thumbed outfielding plus a hitting rampage helped the White Sox to a 12 to 1 victory over the Tigers.

Cigarmakers Beat The West Shore

"Take him out, take him out," this was the main cry in the seventh inning of the baseball game Wednesday evening, at the Athletic Field when Smith, who twirled for the Van Slyke & Horton team blew up and almost lost the game. Poloskie was sent to the rescue and held the West Shore team to a standstill after he reached the mound. The final score was in favor of the cigarmakers, 7 to 6.

In the opening inning the Van Slyke nine reached Radel, the young pitcher for the freight handlers for six runs and four hits. Another run was scored in the fourth. The rest of the game was blink for the cigar makers as far as runs were concerned.

The West Shore team struck hard luck or had an off night as they did not display the same brand of ball as was shown in their previous game against the Universal Road Machinery Company. The freight handlers were able to secure only seven hits in the entire session and four of these were made in the final frame. Radel was hit freely and errors played an important role. Radel was touched for a total of 12 hits. Only seven of the hits were made to count the rest being lost on the bases. Radel allowed the cigarmakers a total of three free passes to first base, one man being advanced for getting hit with a pitched ball.

The crowd of rooters were rather slim and little vocal music was heard until the final frame when it seemed as if the whole population of Kingston was present to join in the uproar.

The score by innings:

Airplane Still Novelty

"I tried recently in a Cleveland hotel to buy an airplane postage stamp for a letter to San Francisco," writes Fred Kelly in the Nation's Business. "The stamp seller had some and said it was the first time he had had such a request. Out of curiosity I then went to another leading hotel and tried to buy stamps for airplane mail. They not only didn't have such stamps, but evidently had never heard of them. I next tried the experiment of asking business men for information about the cost of sending a letter by airplane from Cleveland to New York. Of a score I asked not one knew! The fact is that the airplane mail service, notwithstanding the marvel of it, is still too new to be popular. It takes a long time for a novelty to sink into the public mind."

Colonials Add Another Game

Maurice McDermott Pitches Good Game for Locals, Beating Schenectady Police Team—Up-state Team Gives Pitcher Poor Support.

The Kingston Colonials are still at large for the Schenectady Policemen failed to "pull them in" Wednesday evening when the local ball club again proved their worth. this time to the upstate policemen to the tune of 6-2. The Colonials drew a three-bagger and two doubles, and six singles from the upstate twirler making a total of nine hits, while the Schenectady outfit were manufacturing six.

Smith, who led the defensive for the police, managed to keep the hits scattered enough to do little damage up until the seventh frame when the locals expressed their idea of the outcome and brought across the three important runs with two more in the final inning. Schwab got aboard through the shortstop's misplay. Then Robins sacrificed sending "Biff" to second. Schwab advanced one more base when McDermott hit an equally difficult one for the first baseman and the right fielder to handle. Following "Fitz's" out on a fly to shortstop Kelly made first when the visiting second baseman missed his drive besides giving Schwab a chance to come across with the needed run. Matty as usual then came to the rescue and drilled out a three pointer, bringing in two more to clinch the game.

Morgan and Coyle each made two more runs the following frame. Morgan started his trip through an error of the third sackman and was sent the rest of the way through Coyle's double and Robins's sacrifice. Coyles made his two bagger into a run when the catcher made a poor throw to second.

Jack got the remainder of the spoils during the fifth round after being started through another infield error, this time the offender being the second sackman. Robins advanced a notch through McDermott's hit and finished his sprint when Kelly hit to center field.

The Schenectady Club came across during the fourth and the ninth, both of the visitors runs being credited to Kerley, the left fielder who carried the pair through hits.

The Schenectady Club gave Maurice McDermott a chance to show his stuff as a pitcher. Maurice put his first game across in a creditable manner by keeping the cops limited to six safe wallops, three of which were pounded out in the last frame when McDermott allowed only one ru...
